PREFACE

IN this grammar the authors have aimed to present to English-speaking students the more important facts of pronunciation, inflection, and syntax in a clear and adequate way. No attempt has been made to separate inflection and syntax: it is hardly necessary to keep them asunder in an elementary text-book. An abundance of exercise material has been given, and the exercises have been made as practical as possible. The verb list is very full, and has been provided with ample references, in the hope that it may encourage drill upon one of the most difficult divisions of elementary Spanish grammar.

To no slight degree drill work has been made a conscious feature in the preparation of the composition material. It will be seen, particularly in the later exercises of the book, that the sentences of the English part are based on the words and the turns of phrase occurring in the Spanish part preceding. On this account the student needs to resort but rarely to the Vocabulary, when translating from English into Spanish.

The grammar has been prepared with a view to facilitating the early reading of easy Spanish texts. Teachers do not agree as to when reading should begin, and there can be no fixed rule where conditions vary so greatly. But experience has led us to believe that in most college classes it is best to begin reading almost immediately, and certainly not later than the end of the fourth week, and to give to reading at least one-half of the time thereafter during the school year. Accordingly, the most essential elements of inflection and syntax are set forth, in so far as it seemed practicable, in the first few lessons, the inflection of verbs, for instance, being taken up with the first lesson, and an explanation of the use and meaning of each tense being given along with the inflection.

In classes composed of advanced college students it may be well to take an entire lesson at a time; but in many college classes it will be best to divide each lesson into two parts, and in high and preparatory school classes it may be best to divide each lesson into three parts. The divisions may be made as follows:—

- | | | |
|-----|---|---|
| I. | { | First part ,— inflection and syntax, and Spanish-English exercises. |
| | { | Second part ,— English-Spanish exercises, and a review of inflection and syntax. |
| II. | { | First part ,— inflection and syntax, with much oral drill based thereon. |
| | { | Second part ,— Spanish-English exercises, and a review of inflection and syntax. |
| | { | Third part ,— English-Spanish exercises. |

In each lesson-period there should be as much oral drill as time will permit.

In some lessons there are rules, usually in small type, that may well be omitted on going through the grammar the first time. It has not been indicated definitely which rules should be thus omitted, as it was thought best to leave it to the good judgment of the individual teacher. As an illustration, in Lesson XXIII the following could be omitted : §§ 109, c and e; 111; 115; and 116.

Teachers will differ as to whether it is best to take or omit the English-Spanish exercises, on going through the grammar the first time. Some successful teachers prefer to omit them at first and to take them up with a review. By following this method, the student is the sooner prepared for reading, and he may have an abundance of written work by copying dictated passages taken from the text that is read. After going through the grammar once, the student may then review it, taking at a lesson one or more of the English-Spanish exercises.

We wish to acknowledge our indebtedness to Professor E. S. Joynes, of South Carolina College, for reading the first proofs and making many valuable suggestions; and we cannot sufficiently express our thanks to Mr. S. W. Clary, whose kindly and helpful interest in our book has far transcended mere business considerations.

SPANISH GRAMMAR

PRONUNCIATION

THE ALPHABET

1. The Spanish alphabet has thirty different signs :

a, b, c, ch, d, e, f, g, h, i, j, k, l, ll, m, n, ñ, o, p, q, r, rr, s, t, u, v, w, x, y, z.

The Castilian pronunciation of these is taken as the norm by cultured speakers in Spain. It is therefore the pronunciation adopted here. It is fair to state, however, that certain dialect peculiarities (especially Andalusian) have passed over to the former Spanish colonies in America and the Philippines and now represent the pronunciation of the larger proportion of the Spanish-speaking peoples. The signs k and w occur mainly in words from foreign languages, and in them receive their foreign values.

2. The following table is intended to convey a general idea of the Spanish sounds. Hardly any of the English or other equivalents mentioned are more than approximate ; yet, taken in connection with the more exact description to be given later, they should aid the student to acquire a good Spanish pronunciation.

a	varies in quality between the a of far and that of fat .	c	like k , when the Spanish letter stands before a , o , u or a consonant, or is final.
b	usually like German (bilabial) w : try to pronounce English b and v in one breath.		like th of thin , when the Spanish letter stands before e or i .

ch like ch of church .	ll approximate to lli of million .
d usually approximate to the th of that .	m like English m .
e varies between the vowel sound in mate and that in met .	n like English n pronounced on or close to the teeth.
f usually like English f .	ñ approximate to ni of onion .
g usually like "hard" g of gate , gilt , etc., when the Spanish letter stands before a , o , u , or a consonant.	o varies between the vocalic sound in note and that in not .
like a strong English h produced far back in the mouth (or like German ch of nach), when the Spanish letter stands before e or i .	p like English p .
h usually silent. Before ue it may be pronounced like a weak English h .	q found only with a following u : qu = English k .
i varies between the vocalic sound in meet and that in mit .	r like English r carefully uttered.
j like the variety of Spanish g occurring before e or i . The j has this value everywhere.	rr like English r much prolonged.
k like English k .	s usually like English ss .
l like English l pronounced on or close to the teeth.	t like English t pronounced on or close to the teeth.
	u varies between the vocalic sound in pool and that in pull .
	v the same in sound as Spanish b .
	w as in foreign languages.
	x usually like English x ; occasionally like s .
	y like English y ; occasionally a vowel like Spanish i .
	z like English th of thin ; cf. Spanish c before e or i .

3. Vowels. — The vowel sounds of the speech are denoted by a, e, i, o, u, and occasionally y (which is a vowel in the conjunction y, 'and,' as well as at the end of a word, as in rey, 'king'). The vowel y has the same sound as Spanish i. There is in English a tendency to convert all long vowels into diphthongs; that is, to add a final glide sound to the original vowel. This tendency must be avoided in Spanish, where the individual vowel denotes a simple vocalic sound.

a is approximate to English a in 'far,' or to a sound between the a of 'far' and that of 'fat': it is never so "broad" as English a (open back variety of the vowel) in 'all' nor so "flat" as a (close forward variety of the vowel) in 'fat.'

e is usually closed, but is moderately open in most closed syllables, or when followed by ll or rr, as in él, ser, ten, este, ella, perro, etc., and very open in the diphthong ue (here e approximates the French eu of seul).

i in stressed syllables is always closed; in unstressed syllables it approximates English i in 'pin.'

Open o is the only one that is normal in Castilian, but it is not so open as open Italian o. It is like French o in nord; and not very different from English o in 'north.' It is more closed after labials (as in amor) and in open syllables, but is never so closed as in French beau.

Stressed u is almost equal to English oo in 'food' (not so rounded as French ou); in a closed syllable it generally approximates to English oo in 'book.' The caution is to be given that Spanish u should never be pronounced like the diphthongal u of English 'tune' or 'cube.'

It would be futile to attempt to give here any more precise definition of the vowel sounds than has been given. As has been intimated, each vowel may have an open or a close value, similar to the open and close qualities of the vowels in French and Italian. But in Spanish these differences of quality are not of so marked importance as in those other languages.

Moreover, Spanish vowels are not so "rounded" or "closed" as in French, but more so than in English.

Quantity.—In Castilian there are no long vowels, properly speaking, all being short or of medium length. English-speaking students must avoid prolonging vowels, especially final vowels, as occurs so generally in English when the vowel is stressed.

Elision.—Elision is common in spoken Spanish, where a vowel is repeated, as in de él (pronounced d'el), la altura (l'altura), de este (d'este), ya lo oigo (ya l'oigo).

4. Diphthongs and Triphthongs.—The vowels may be divided into two chief classes: the strong, a, e, o; and the weak, i (y) and u.

A combination of two or three adjacent vowels may form a single syllable in pronunciation; such a combination constitutes a diphthong or a triphthong. The individual elements of a diphthong or a triphthong are all to be pronounced, but more rapidly than when they stand outside such a combination.

1. Diphthongs. — A Spanish diphthong, properly so called, consists of a combination into a single syllable of one of the strong vowels (a, e, o) with one of the weak vowels (i or y, u), or of one (i) of the weak vowels with the other (u). The stress, if the syllable be the accented one of the word, will fall upon the strong vowel, or upon the second of the weak vowels where the diphthong consists of two of these latter.

The possible combinations, governed by the relative position of the vowels, are given in the following list. The vowel of the diphthong that may bear the stress is the one in heavy type.

ai (ay), as in baile, dance (hay, there is, there are).	ia, as in fiar, to trust .
au, as in flauta, flute .	ua, as in cuatro, four .
ei (ey), as in reina, queen (rey, king).	ie, as in sien, temple .
eu, as in deuda, debt .	ue, as in fuerte, strong .
oi (oy), as in oigo, I hear (doy, I give).	io, as in naciones, nations .
ou, as in bou, fishing-boat (a rare diphthong).	uo, as in cuota, quota .
iu, as in triunfo, triumph .	ui, as in huír, to flee .

a. The vowels of these combinations are of approximately equal force in a diphthong not bearing the accent of the word, as in bailar, 'to dance'; flautero, 'flute-player'; reinar, 'to reign'; deudor, 'debtor'; oigamos, 'let us hear'; triunfar, 'to triumph'; fiaremos, 'we shall trust,' etc.

b. Two adjacent strong vowels are normally regarded as forming two distinct syllables, and not a diphthong; as in faena, 'labor'; caoba, 'mahogany'; loa, 'prologue'; reo, 'defendant'; leer, 'to read'; roer, 'to gnaw,' etc. So also a combination of two weak vowels with the stress on the first of them (as in fluido, 'fluid'), or of a strong and a weak vowel with the stress on the weak vowel (as in traído, 'bought'; roído, 'gnawed'), forms not a diphthong, but two separate syllables. In these two latter cases the stress is usually indicated by a written accent. For metrical purposes even these adjacent vowels may occasionally count as a single syllable.

2. Triphthongs.—A triphthong consists of a combination of a stressed strong vowel with two weak vowels, between which it is always placed. There are but four possible combinations, all of which end in i (written y in the final position or before the vowel of another syllable).

iai, as in fiáis, you trust.

iei, as in lieis, may you bind.

uai (uay), as in fraguáis, you forge (guay, woe).

uei (uey), as in continuéis, may you continue (buey, ox; bueyes, oxen).

NOTE.—Spanish words cannot properly begin with a diphthong or a triphthong. Where the normal development of a Latin word into Spanish involved the passage of initial stressed ě to ie, or of initial stressed ō to ue (for Spanish usually broke up the short Latin vowels into these diphthongs), the i was changed to y and an h was prefixed to the u: e.g. Latin ĕrrat, Spanish yerra (for ierra), 'he errs' (cf. Latin errāre, Spanish errar, 'to err'); Latin ōvum, Spanish huevo, 'egg.'

5. Consonants.¹—For the sake of convenience the consonants will be considered in several groups, determined, in the main, by the kind of organs that produce the sounds in question.

6. Labials and labio-dentals, that is, sounds produced by the action, upon a current of air, of the lips alone or of the upper teeth and the lower lip working together:

b, v, p, f, m, w (u in hiatus).

b and v denote the same sound. This (a voiced¹ bilabial spirant) is ordinarily one not used in English, but is akin to the German (bilabial) w. It is most easily pronounced by seeking to utter the English b without closing the lips entirely (as is requisite in the true English b), and permitting the air to pass out constantly through a narrow slit between the lips; as in beber, 'to drink'; vivir, 'to live.' The sound of the English v (labio-dental) does not exist in Castilian.

After m or n (whether n be in the same word or at the end of the preceding word) both the b and the v receive a sound like that of the English b (a voiced labial stop); as in también, 'as well,' 'also'; envidia, 'envy' (often spelled embidia in Old Spanish); con valor, 'with courage.' In such cases the n, even though retained in spelling, receives the value of m. Moreover, the English sound of b is often given to both b and v when initial and emphatic, as in ¡basta! 'enough!' ¡villano! 'villain!' Before t or s, a b approximates sometimes to p in sound (i.e. becomes voiceless), as in subterráneo, 'subterranean'; abstenerse, 'to abstain,' etc.; and in such cases it is often slighted entirely in popular speech, as in substancia, oscuro,² etc.

p. Approximately the English sound (a voiceless labial stop); as in papel, 'paper.'

f. Usually like the English f (a voiceless labio-dental spirant); as in favor, 'favor.'

Although the fact is denied by some observers, it is a question whether the f does not occasionally have a voiceless value corresponding to the voiced one of b and v (i.e. whether it is not a voiceless bilabial spirant).

m resembles the English m (a voiced labial nasal); as in mimar, 'to fondle.'

² The b of oscuro, substancia, etc., is commonly omitted in writing, and is pronounced only by the pedantic.

w occurs usually in words from foreign languages, and in them it has the foreign pronunciation: thus it has the English sound in Wellington and the German sound in Wagner. Unaccented u in hiatus, as in fuerte, 'strong,' or cuando, 'when,' is, in Castilian pronunciation, only a semi-vowel; that is, it is partly a consonant, and as such it approximates in value to the English w.

W is found in Spanish in a few proper names that are by no means recent importations, but go back to the period of Visigothic dominion in Spain: Wamba, Witiza. In these it receives the usual value of Spanish b and v: cf. the spellings Vamba and Vitiza sometimes found.

7. Dentals or lingua-dentals, that is, sounds produced by the united action of the tongue and the teeth upon a current of air.

t, d, c (followed by e or i), z, l, n. Along with these may be considered ll, ñ, and a variety of n occurring before "hard" c, qu, or "hard" g, etc., although these l and n sounds are not properly dentals.

t. Not unlike English t, except that it, as well as all the Spanish dentals, is produced farther forward in the mouth than the English dentals.

In Spanish the point of the tongue often touches the teeth when the t and other dentals are produced, whereas in English the tongue is allowed to touch the roof of the mouth somewhat back of the roots of the upper teeth. There is, therefore, a very appreciable difference between the sounds of t and n in English ten and those in Spanish ten, 'hold.'

d. There is a marked difference between the sound of English d and that of Spanish d, for the latter, without being interdental, somewhat resembles the th of English then. It may be compared to an English d prolonged, and uttered with the tongue touching the upper teeth. Ex., seda, nadie, todo.

The English d (a voiced dental stop) is produced by the escape of air from the mouth after the passage of the air has first been stopped by contact between the tongue and the roof of the mouth back of the upper teeth. The common Spanish sound (a voiced dental spirant) is produced during contact between the tongue and the teeth, and the passage of the air is not wholly cut off.

At the beginning of a breath-group, or after l or n, d has some of the explosive effect of the English d, as in ¡diablo! ‘the deuce!’; espalda, ‘shoulder’; andando, ‘walking.’ At the end of a word the Castilian sound of d resembles that of th in English thin (a voiceless dental spirant, = z), as in sed, ‘thirst’; while in Andalusia and Spanish America it tends to disappear entirely, as in usted, ‘you,’ which is usually pronounced usté. Between vowels, d has disappeared largely in the pronunciation of untrained speakers, and even those who pronounce carefully show a decided tendency to suppress this intervocalic d, saying, for example, amao for amado, ‘loved.’ Moreover, both the written and the spoken language have already accepted the loss of the intervocalic d of the reflexive imperative second person plural: e.g. amaos, ‘love one another’ (for amad, ‘love,’ + os, ‘you,’ ‘each other’).

c followed by e or i ; } These have a common value (a voiceless dental spirant) in Castilian speech, viz. a lispingsound approximate to that of th in English thin, as in cielo, ‘heaven’; cena, ‘supper’; zapato, ‘shoe.’ Compare the value of final Spanish d as already described. In Southern Spain and in Spanish America and the Philippines, both c (e, i) and z are pronounced like s.

According to some observers, a z followed by a voiced consonant (i.e. such a consonant as n, l, g, etc.) may itself become voiced and have approximately the value of English th in then; as in portazgo, ‘toll’; hazlo, ‘do it’; gozne, ‘hinge.’

l and n have usually values resembling the English values (l, a voiced lateral fricative; n, a voiced dental nasal), but they are produced farther forward in the mouth than the English sounds, so that there is a perceptible difference between the sounds of l and n in English lance and those in its Spanish equivalent lanza, as there is between the n of English ten and that of Spanish ten, 'hold.'

Final l in Spanish never has the semi-vocalic, "hollow" sound of final English l. Compare English 'dell' with Spanish del.

When followed by the so-called "hard" g or k sound, by g (before e or i), by j, or by aspirated h (in hue-), as in vengo, 'I come'; blanco, 'white'; banquero, 'banker'; rengífero, 'reindeer'; naranja, 'orange'; un hueso, 'a bone,' n ceases to be dental, and acquires a value similar to that of ng in English sing (i.e. a velar nasal value).

In some parts of Spain and of Spanish America the velar sound of final n is common, as in pan (pronounced pang); but this pronunciation should be avoided.

ll has a sound most nearly represented in English by that of lli in million (i.e. it is a palatalized form of l, not a doubled l, in sound).

It should be noted that while the English sound of lli in million is that of l followed by that of y, the Spanish sound is that of l infected by y throughout the duration of its enunciation; i.e. it is l no longer dental, but produced with the tongue in the y position, or, in other words, with the middle of the tongue touching the hard palate. There is, therefore, some difference between the pronunciation of lli in million and that of ll in its Spanish equivalent millón. In some parts of Spain and Spanish America, ll has become iy in sound, e.g. caballo, 'horse,' is pronounced cabaiyo; in the vulgar speech of certain regions, this y has disappeared entirely when immediately following the stressed syllable, e.g. caballo, si-a for silla, etc. (but cabai-yito for caballito, si-yita for sillita, etc.). This omission of y, while very common in some parts of Mexico, the Argentine Republic, etc., is everywhere considered as vulgar.

ñ. This (a palatalized form of n) is similarly n produced with the tongue in the y position. It is only approximately rendered by the ni of onion or the ny of canyon: this latter expresses in a measure, but yet not perfectly, the ñ of the Spanish original cañón. The mark over the n is termed the tilde

8. Gutturals,¹ i.e. throat sounds.

c { followed by a, o, or u ;
 followed by any consonant except h ;
 at the end of a word.

qu always followed by e or i.

k in foreign words.

g { followed by a, o, or u ;
 followed by a consonant.

gu when followed by e or i.

The first three of these, i.e. c in the positions indicated, qu, and k, have approximately the sound of English k or "hard" c (a voiceless guttural or palatal stop); as in carro, 'cart'; conde, 'count'; culto, 'cult'; creador, 'creator'; frac, 'frock coat'; quedo, 'quiet'; quilla, 'keel'; kiosko, 'kiosk'; kilómetro, 'kilometre.'

The last two in the list, i.e. g before a, o, u, or a consonant, and gu before e or i, have approximately the sound of the "hard" English g (a voiced guttural or palatal stop) of got or get; as in galante, 'gallant'; golfo, 'gulf'; gutural, 'guttural'; gruta, 'grotto'; guarda, 'guard'; guerrilla, 'guerilla'; guía, 'guide.'

In such cases as these last two (guerrilla, guía) the u is not itself pronounced, but is merely a sign that the g has the "hard" sound before the following e or i. Where the gu is followed by another vowel than these, the g has its "hard" sound, but the u is now pronounced, having to some degree the value of English w, as in guano, 'guano.' Occasionally, even before e or i, the u has a pronounceable value, but in such cases it must be written with a diæresis, as in antigüedad, 'antiquity'; lingüístico, 'linguistic.'

In the speech of many, perhaps most, Spaniards and Spanish Americans, intervocalic "hard" g tends to become slightly spirant (i.e. a prolonged g: cf. b and d), except after n, as in hago, 'I make'; hormiga, 'ant'; droga, 'drug,' etc. (but not in tengo, 'I have,' etc.). In some parts of southern Spain and Spanish America, g before u + vowel, and gu before i + vowel, tend to disappear in the vulgar speech, as awa for agua, 'water,' siyendo for siguiendo, 'following,' etc.

9. Sibilants, i.e. hissing sounds. In Castilian s is the only simple sign denoting a sibilant value, but there are two signs denoting a compound sound into which an s value enters, viz. ch and x.

s. The Spanish s commonly has the sharp hissing sound of English initial s, as in 'sing,' and of English ss, as in 'hiss'; thus, saco, 'sack'; sal, 'salt'; pasar, 'to pass'; notas, 'notes.'

Caution must be taken not to give to Spanish s between vowels the sound of English z (a voiced sibilant) or of intervocalic English s as in 'rose.'

With regard to the s before a voiced consonant, usage varies. In some parts of the Spanish-speaking world it remains unvoiced, in other parts it becomes voiced, as in desde, 'since'; sesgo, 'slope'; mismo, 'same,' 'self,' etc.

In Andalusia and parts of Spanish America, s before a consonant, and final in stressed syllables, becomes in the vulgar speech a soft aspirate, approximating to, but softer than, German ch in ich. Ex.: las bonitas muchachas becomes la' bonita' muchachas; el compás, el compa'; dos niños, do' niños, etc. This pronunciation is rather widespread.

ch, a compound sound (a voiceless dental plus a voiceless palatal sibilant), not much unlike the ch of 'church.' It is made up of the sound of the Spanish dental t, followed by a sound similar to that of English sh; as in mucho, 'much.'

x, a compound sound (a voiceless guttural stop plus a voiceless sibilant s), usually quite like the x of English 'six' or 'lax.' It consists of a k sound followed by the sibilant s sound, as in axioma, 'axiom.' When the x stands before a consonant, the Spanish Academy insists that it be still pronounced as ks; but the generality of speakers pronounce it there as s simply; thus, in extranjero, 'stranger'; sexto, 'sixth.' In such cases there is a manifest tendency to write s instead of x, i.e. estranjero, sesto, etc.

Between vowels x is, according to certain authorities, sometimes pronounced like English gs (i.e. as a voiced guttural stop plus a sibilant), so that the x of Spanish examen may resemble the x of its English equivalent 'examination.'

10. Aspirates, or well-breathed sounds.

j in all positions.

g followed by e or i.

h followed by ue.

j in all positions and g before e or i denote the one sound (a voiceless guttural or velar spirant) which is most closely approximated in English by pronouncing the h of 'hot' very far back in the mouth and in a very forcible way; as in jamás, 'never'; gente, 'people'; girar, 'to turn.' The sound of the German ch in nach, doch, etc., affords a still closer parallel to the Spanish sound.

In the production of this Spanish sound, the velar (or soft) palate vibrates against the back of the tongue, which is withdrawn as much as possible into the rear of the mouth. The Castilian sound is a harsh one, but it is softened in Andalusia and Spanish America to the value of a strong English h or the German ch of ich.

h followed by the diphthong ue may have a slight aspiration, equal to that of a weak utterance of English h; as in huerto, 'garden'; hueso, 'bone.' By many speakers, however, this h is not pronounced at all, and, in fact, for the generality of Castilians h never denotes a sound.

11. Tongue-trilled Consonants : r and rr. These denote a sound not very dissimilar to that of the English r carefully pronounced, and, upon occasion, having a well-prolonged trill.

The sound is produced by making the forward part of the tongue vibrate against the palate, just back of the upper teeth. The point of contact between the tongue and the palate is a little farther forward than in English.

Final r in Spanish never has the semivocalic glide sound of final English r. Compare English ther(e) and Spanish ser.

There are two varieties of the sound :

a. A weaker variety, i.e. one not very forcibly trilled, and yet fully as strong as a carefully pronounced English r. This is denoted in Spanish by a single r between vowels, as in pero, 'but,' and by a single r after the consonants b, c, d, f, g, p, t; as in bravo, 'wild'; cristiano, 'Christian'; ladrón, 'robber'; fresno, 'ash tree'; grano, 'grain'; prado, 'meadow'; trato, 'behavior.' The final r, as in amar, 'to love,' may be of this variety, or it may be a trifle more prolonged in its trill. In any event it is to be carefully uttered, and not slurred as it so often is in English; cf. 'paper,' 'mother,' etc., in which the r sound is barely discernible.

b. A reënforced variety, i.e. one with a well-prolonged trill. It is not a doubled consonant, but rather a prolongation of the other variety. It is denoted by rr between vowels, as in perro, 'dog'; parra, 'vine' (cf. pero, 'but,' and para, 'for,' in which the weaker variety occurs), and by single r at the beginning of a word, as in roble, 'oak,' or within a word after n or s, as in enredo, 'entanglement'; Israelita, 'Israelite.' Within a word, after b or l marking the end of a prefix, this same strong r occurs, as in subrayar, 'to underline' (cf. raya, 'line,' with initial strong r), and malrotar, 'to squander.' The fact that initial single r denotes the same reënforced variety as intervocalic rr is shown by words like rota, 'rout,' and its derivative derrota.

12. Spirant y (a voiced palatal spirant or fricative), not much unlike English y in sound, except that its enunciation is somewhat stronger, as in ya, 'already'; yo, 'I'; yeso, 'gypsum.'¹

Unaccented i in hiatus is often but a semivowel; i.e., it is partly consonantal and tends to become y. This is especially so in the case of the diphthong ie: cf. yerra, 'he errs,' for ierra, and the spelling yerba, 'herb,' and hierba, side by side. As already stated, y is a vowel in the conjunction y, 'and'; it is a vowel (or at least a semivowel) wherever it occurs in a diphthong or triphthong, as in bocoy, 'hogshead'; buey, 'ox.'

13. Non-phonetic Orthography.

(1) Spanish orthography is not consistently phonetic, though much more so than English orthography. According to the rules of the Spanish Academy, only two letters are ever mute, viz. h and u, as follows:

h is regularly silent, as in hado, 'fate'; hilo, 'thread'; but before ue it may be slightly aspirated, as in hueso, 'bone.' In the digraph ch it has no individual value.

u is silent, or at least has no individual value, in the combination qu. It is also not pronounced in the combination gu followed by e or i; it is there but a sign of "hard" g: cf. sigue, 'he follows,' siguió, 'he followed,' with sigo, 'I follow,' sigu, 'let me follow.' If it happen that the u of the combination gue or gui is actually pronounced, a diæresis is written over it; e.g. argüir, 'to argue'; averigüé, 'I ascertained' (cf. the infinitive averiguar, in which the u is of course pronounced).

(2) In addition to h and u, there are several letters that, in certain combinations, are usually not pronounced in colloquial Spanish, viz.:

b is mute in obsuro, obsceno, obstáculo, obstinarse, etc.; abstracción, abstener, etc.; substancia, subscribir, etc. That is, b before s is usually silent; if it is pronounced, it is as p, e.g. absoluto > apsoluto (cf. bt > pt, as in subterráneo). In written Spanish also this b is commonly omitted in obsuro, substancia, etc.

c, before a consonant, is often mute, as in diccionario, lección, afectísimo, etc. Students are advised to pronounce this c.

d is often silent in the final position, and between vowels when it follows stressed a, o, or u (less often after e or i), as in Madrid, amado, nada, todo, toda, d menudo, etc.; also before s, as in adscribir, adstringir, etc. The student should pronounce medial d. As to final d, see § 7.

g, before a consonant, is often mute, as in digno, magnánimo, etc. The student had best pronounce this g.

j is mute only in reloj (occasionally written reló). In the plural, relojes, j is pronounced.

n is usually mute in the prefix trans- before a consonant, as in transcribir, transmitir, etc.; but it is often pronounced in transatlántico, etc.

p is mute usually in subscripción, séptimo, Septiembre, pseudo, psicología, etc. (i.e., before t or s, p is usually silent). In written Spanish also this p is commonly omitted in séptimo, Septiembre, etc.

(3) Some other non-phonetic peculiarities of Spanish orthography are as follows:

b = v. See § 6.

n, before p or v, has the sound of m, as in un perro, un vaso, etc.; cf. § 7.

x, before a consonant, is usually pronounced as s, as in extremo, exposición, etc. Regularly between vowels, and often before c, x = cs, as in éxito, excelente, etc. (but in exacto, x = s).

NOTE.—The Spanish Academy has attempted of late years to put back into Spanish many sounds that had disappeared or changed, as the x of experiencia in place of s, the b of obsuro, the p of séptimo, the d of adscribir, the t of istmo, etc., and the Academy has asked the Spanish people to use these restored sounds in their speech. To some extent the sounds have been adopted, and they may be heard on the stage and in the pulpit, but practically never in colloquial Spanish (except x, which is making headway), and in some cases their use would be considered ridiculously pedantic. Similarly, the Academy asks that b and v be pronounced like English or French b and v, but no Spaniard can do this unless he knows English or French. The coming together of b and v into one sound is very old in Spain, for even in the days of ancient Rome a Latin wit said that for the Spaniards vivere was the same as bibere.

14. Doubled letters.—The general statement may be made that the doubling of consonants is not favored in Spanish. ll and rr do not represent double sounds, and they figure in the alphabet as distinct signs, for ll denotes a peculiar quality of l (the palatalized l), and rr denotes a prolongation of the simple r sound. Two consonants, however, may be written double, viz. c and n, and in the refined pronunciation of Castile each of the two c's or two n's is carefully articulated: as in accidente, 'accident' (of which the first c sounds like k, and the second like th of thin), and in innoble, 'ignoble.'

No other consonant is doubled in writing or pronunciation in modern Spanish. To the frequent mm of English (mostly in words of Latin and Romance origin) there corresponds the Spanish nm; as in inmenso, 'im-mense.' Of the vowels only e occurs doubled with any frequency, and each e is pronounced in a distinct syllable: as in creer, 'to believe'; leer, 'to read.' Some of the double e's of early Spanish are now reduced to single e: cf. ser, 'to be,' for original seer; ver, 'to see,' for original veer. We occasionally find a and o doubled and pronounced accordingly; the first a or o usually belongs to a prefix, as in contraalmirante, 'rear admiral'; cooperar, 'to coöperate.'

ACCENTUATION

15. For certain words it is necessary to indicate the place for the stress of the voice by a written accent put over the vowel of the syllable bearing it; for many others this written accent is not necessary, as, in accordance with rules laid down by the Spanish Academy, the mere aspect of the word clearly indicates the place of the chief stress. The leading rules are these:

(1) Words ending in a vowel, or in the consonants n or s, normally stress the second last syllable (the penult), and they require no written accent, as in :

carta, letter.	respiro, I breathe.	hablan, they speak.
palabra, word.	sollozo, sob.	cartas, letters.
dulce, sweet.	tribu, tribe.	naciones, nations.
hijo, son.

Words ending in n or s normally receive the same treatment as those ending in a vowel, because the n or s is often but a sign of pluralization, or of verbal inflection, and is added to forms that regularly end in a vowel : cf. carta, 'letter,' and cartas, 'letters'; ama, 'he loves,' and aman, 'they love.'

(2) Words ending in a consonant except n or s (cf. Rule 1) normally stress the last syllable and need no written accent, as :

verdad, truth.	igual, equal.
-----------------------	----------------------

For accentual purposes, final y (which can never be accented itself) may be regarded as a consonant : hence, bocoy, 'hogshhead'; muy, 'very.'

(3) All words stressed on a syllable preceding the second last, and all not obeying the two rules already given, must have a written accent over the vowel bearing the stress ; e.g. :

ejército, army.	mamá, mamma.	interés, interest.
hígado, liver.	rubí, ruby.	lápiz, lead pencil.
telégrafo, telegraph.	nación, nation.	mármol, marble.
sofá, sofa.	amáis, you love (cf. amas , thou lovest).

As a result of the addition of the plural sign -es (but not -s), a word not bearing a written accent in the singular may now have to take one; as in crímen, 'crime' (cf. Rule 1), pl. crímenes (cf. Rule 3); or, again, an accent written in the singular may not need to be written in the plural, as in nación (cf. Rule 3), pl. naciones (cf. Rule 1). It is the general principle that the addition of the plural sign should not affect the place of the accent. This principle is violated in the case of carácter, 'character' (cf. Rule 3), and régimen, 'régime' (cf. Rule 3), which in the plural shift their accent one syllable farther on : caracteres (Rule 1) and regímenes (Rule 3).

16. Diphthongs and Triphthongs.— If the stressed syllable of the word have a diphthong, this will bear the accent (written or unwritten) on the strong vowel, if there be one, or on the second of two weak vowels, as in :

baile, dance.	buitre, vulture.	arguís, you argue.
amáis, you love.	huis, you flee.

A triphthong will always bear the accent (written or unwritten) on the strong vowel :

averiguáis, you ascertain.	feis, may you trust.
-----------------------------------	-----------------------------

17. Monosyllables normally take no written accent :

huis, you flee.	plan, plan.
ruin, vile.	feis, may you trust.

Occasionally, however, a written accent is found in monosyllables (or words usually monosyllabic; cf. aun), and then its use is (1) that of a diacritic, intended to distinguish the sense or the particular employment of words written and pronounced identically alike, as in cómo, 'how,' as distinguished from como, 'as'; in mí, 'me,' as distinguished from mi, 'my'; in éste, 'this one' (a pronoun), as distinguished from este, 'this' (an adjective); in quién, 'who' (an interrogative), as distinguished from quien, 'who' (a relative), etc.; or (2), merely arbitrary, as ú, 'or,' and á, 'at,' and é, 'and' (which do not need the accent to distinguish them from ha, 'he has,' and he, 'I have.')

The analogy of other preterites explains the use of the accent in certain monosyllabic preterites, such as fuí, 'I was,' fué, 'he was.' When aun, 'still,' 'yet,' is emphatic, it may become a dissyllable, and will then stress its u, which (cf. § 15, Rule 3) must bear a written accent, aún.

18. Compound words, felt as such, normally stress the proper syllable of each component part, especially in the case of adverbs in -mente (the Spanish equivalent of English adverbial -ly) and of compound numerals; and any accent that had to be written in one of the parts standing alone will continue to be written in the compound :

fácilmente, easily (cf. fácil , easy).	décimoséptimo, seventeenth (cf. dé- cimo , tenth , and séptimo , seventh).
dulcemente, sweetly .

The addition of a pronoun-object to a verb form will not lead to the omission of any written accent that the verb form had when standing alone, as in améle, 'I loved him' (cf. amé, 'I loved'), even though without the writing of the accent its position is clear enough.

On the other hand, a verb form which does not normally need a written accent will take one if, by the addition of one or more object-pronouns, its stress is placed more than two syllables from the end of its whole combination, thus: diciendo, 'saying,' but diciéndomelo, 'saying it to me'; haga, 'do' (polite imperative), but hágalo, 'do it.'

NOTE.—The accent of the stressed syllable of a word is as strong as in English; but the unstressed vowels must not be slurred in pronunciation, as they so often are in English.

SYLLABIFICATION

19. A single consonantal character and the digraphs ch, ll, rr (these three being inseparable combinations) are, in a syllabic division, passed over to the following vowel; so, also, are most combinations of a consonant with an ensuing l or r (except rl, sl, tl, and sr, which are separable):

la-bio, lip .	cu-brir, to cover .	cua-tro, four .
ja-ca, pony .	su-frir, to suffer .	no-ble, noble .
la-do, side .	re-pri-mir, to repress .	mo-fle-tu-do, chubby-cheeked .
ne-xo, knot .	la-cre, sealing-wax .	su-plir, to supply .
mu-cho, much .	ma-gro, meagre .	te-cla, key .
bu-llir, to boil .	ma-dre, mother .	si-glo, century .
pa-rra, vine .
Cf. mer-lu-za, cod .		es-la-bón, link .
At-lán-ti-co, Atlantic .		Is-ra-e-li-ta, Israelite .

20. With the exception of the inseparable combinations mentioned in the foregoing rule, two consonants between vowels are so divided that one remains with the preceding, the other goes to the following vowel:

ap-to, fit .	más-til, mast .	in-no-ble, ignoble , etc.
cor-te, court .	ac-ci-den-te, accident .

Where the combination of consonants between vowels is of more than two, there is a tendency to pass over to the second vowel only a single consonant or one of the inseparable combinations mentioned in § 19 ; e.g. :

par-che, plaster.

cons-truc-ción, construction.

pers-pi-ca-cia, perspicacity.

21. Prefixes felt as such are usually kept intact, contrary to the rule in § 19 ; e.g. :

des-es-pe-rar, to despair (cf. esperar, to hope).

sub-le-var-se, to rebel (cf. levar, to raise).

PUNCTUATION

22. The only notable points here are the double use of question marks and exclamation points, which not only end their clause, but in an inverted form usually precede it (e.g. ¿Cómo está Vd.? 'How are you?' ¡Qué hermosa mujer! 'What a beautiful woman!') and the frequency of suspension points (. . .) in narrative or dramatic style.

CAPITALIZATION

23. Capitals are less commonly used in Spanish than in English. Unless they begin a sentence, a line of verse, or a quotation, proper adjectives and the pronoun yo, 'I,' are not capitalized. National or other locative adjectives used as nouns may take a capital when they denote persons (although usage varies in this respect): when they denote languages, they usually take no capital, even though used substantively: los Franceses (or franceses) hablan francés, 'Frenchmen speak French.'

LESSON I

24. Gender of Nouns.—All Spanish nouns are either masculine or feminine; thus, grammatically speaking, árbol, 'tree,' is masculine, and casa, 'house,' is feminine.

(1) Names of male beings are masculine, and names of female beings are feminine, as in English.

(2) Names of things are masculine if they end in o, and feminine if they end in a. If they end otherwise, it is usually best to learn the gender of each noun separately.

taza, fem., cup.

a. But mano, 'hand,' is feminine; and día, 'day,' mapa, 'map,' and several words of Greek origin ending in -ta and -ma are masculine.¹

25. Many names of living beings have both a masculine and a feminine form, the latter ending in a.

gato, cat (male).

gata, cat (female).

monje, monk.

huésped, guest (male).

huésped, guest (female).

26. Indefinite Article.—The Spanish indefinite article is un before a masculine, una before a feminine noun.

a. In Spanish the indefinite article must be repeated before each noun to which it refers: una casa y un jardín, 'a house and garden.'

b. Una sometimes loses its a before a noun beginning with stressed a or ha: un alma, 'a soul.' In Spain the full form is more usual.

27. The Regular Conjugations.—Spanish verbs are conveniently divided, according to the infinitive endings -ar, -er, and -ir, into three conjugations :

I	II	III
hablar, (to) speak.	temer, (to) fear.	vivir, (to) live.

Like these are inflected all regular verbs with corresponding infinitive endings.

28. Indicative. Present Tense.

Hablar

- | | |
|--------------------|---|
| 1. hablo , | I speak, I do speak, I am speaking. |
| 2. hablas , | you speak, do speak, are speaking. |
| 3. habla , | he, she, or it speaks, does speak, is speaking. |

- | | |
|----------------------|-------------------------------------|
| 1. hablamos , | we speak, do speak, are speaking. |
| 2. habláis , | you speak, do speak, are speaking. |
| 3. hablan , | they speak, do speak, are speaking. |

- | | |
|------------------|------------------------------|
| 1. temo , | I fear, do fear, etc. |
| 2. temes | |
| 3. teme | |

- | | |
|-------------------|--|
| 1. tememos | |
| 2. teméis | |
| 3. temen | |

- | | |
|------------------|------------------------------|
| 1. vivo , | I live, do live, etc. |
| 2. vives | |

- | | |
|-------------------|--|
| 1. vivimos | |
| 2. vivís | |
| 3. viven | |

Note that the Spanish verb may be expressed in English in three different ways; thus, hablo means 'I speak,' 'I do speak,' or 'I am speaking.' Note also that the subject-pronouns may be omitted in Spanish though required in English.

Vocabulary

á, to.	leer, (to) read.
amigo, -a, m. and f. , friend.	mal, badly.
Antonio, m. , Anthony.	María, f. , Mary.
aprender, (to) learn.	mucho, much, a-great-deal.
bien, well. ¹	muy, very.
carta, f. , letter.	papel, m. , paper.
comprar, (to) buy.	papel secante, m. , blotting paper.
con, with.	para, in-order-to.
en, in.	pero, but.
escribir, (to) write.	pluma, f. , pen.
Español, -ola, m. and f. , Spaniard,	poco, little.
Spanish woman.	Señor, -ora, m. and f. , Sir, Madam.
español, -ola, Spanish.	sí, yes.
estudiar, (to) study.	sobre, m. , envelope. ✓
inglés, -esa, English.	también, also.
Juan, m. , John.	tinta, f. , ink.
lápiz, m. , pencil.	trabajar, (to) work.

Exercise I

- A. 1. Escribimos mucho. 2. Compro papel y un lápiz.
 3. Juan compra tinta y una pluma. 4. María compra papel secante y un sobre. 5. ¿Escribes¹ una carta? 6. Sí, señor ; escribo una carta á un amigo. 7. María escribe también una carta á una amiga. 8. Escribo á un Español. 9. María escribe á una Española. 10. Escribo con una pluma.
 11. María escribe con un lápiz. 12. ¿Leéis mucho?
 13. Sí, señora ; leemos mucho para aprender. 14. ¿Aprendéis mucho? 15. Sí, señora ; aprendemos á leer y á escribir.
 16. Leemos y escribimos mucho para aprender á leer y á escribir. 17. Juan, ¿estudias mucho? 18. Sí, señor ; estudio mucho y aprendo bien. 19. Antonio estudia poco y aprende mal. 20. Juan trabaja mucho, pero Antonio trabaja muy poco. 21. Hablo inglés y español.² 22. Aprendemos á leer en español.

B. 1. I speak Spanish.² 2. Do you speak English? 3. Yes, sir; I speak English and Spanish. 4. Mary reads and writes in English. 5. John and Anthony read and write in Spanish. 6. Are you (pl.) writing a letter? 7. Yes, sir; we are writing a letter to a Spaniard. 8. Are you (sing.) buying a pen and ink? 9. Yes, madam; I am buying a pen, ink, and paper. 10. Mary is buying an envelope and blotting paper. 11. We are writing a letter to a friend (fem.). 12. Do you (pl.) write much? 13. We write very little. 14. John writes with a pencil and Anthony writes with a pen. 15. We study much in-order-to learn to³ speak Spanish. 16. Mary studies much and learns well. 17. Anthony studies little and learns badly. 18. We work a great deal in-order-to learn. 19. We learn much and we work much.

¹ Note that an inverted interrogation mark is required in Spanish at the beginning of an interrogative sentence or clause. ² Note that a Spanish name of a language, like a Spanish proper adjective, is written with a small initial letter. ³ Use á, see § 120 (1), a.

LESSON II

29. Plural of Nouns.— The plural of nouns is formed by adding s or es to the singular.

(1) If the noun ends in an unstressed vowel or diphthong, s is added.

amigo, friend.

rosas, roses.

(2) If the noun ends in a consonant or in a stressed vowel or diphthong, es is added.¹

flor , flower.	flores , flowers.
mes , month.	meses , months.
rubí , ruby.	rubíes , rubies.
bajá , pashaw.	bajaes , pashaws.
rey , king.	reyes , kings.

Exceptions :—

a. Nouns ending in stressed -e add s to form the plural: pie, 'foot'; pies, 'feet.'

b. Nouns ending in unstressed -es or -is have the same form in the plural as in the singular: lunes, 'Monday'; lunes, 'Mondays'; but Inglés, 'Englishman'; Ingleses, 'Englishmen'; crisis, 'crisis'; crisis, 'crises.' Family names, especially those ending in z, generally remain unchanged in the plural; e.g., González, los González.

c. Some nouns ending in stressed o or u take either -s or -es. Papá and mamá add -s. There are a few other exceptions, which are best learned by observation.

NOTE.—Final z is changed to c before es: cruz, 'cross'; cruces, 'crosses'; voz, 'voice'; voces, 'voices.'

30. Definite Article.—In Spanish the definite article changes its form according to the gender and number of the noun it modifies.

	SINGULAR	PLURAL
Masculine :	el	los
Feminine :	la (el)	las
el padre , the father.		los padres , the fathers.
la madre , the mother.		las madres , the mothers.
el plato , the plate.		los platos , the plates.
la taza , the cup.		las tazas , the cups.

¹ In pluralizing, y final may be regarded as a consonant: it is really the last element of a stressed diphthong or triphthong, as in bocoy, 'hog'shead,' and buey, 'ox.'

a. When el is preceded by de, 'of,' or by á, 'to,' the preposition and the article are contracted into one word: de and el become del, and á and el become al: del padre, 'of the father'; al padre, 'to the father.'

b. El is used instead of the form la before a feminine singular noun beginning with stressed a or ha: el agua, 'water'; el hacha, 'the axe.'

NOTE.—Observe that el is not used before a feminine noun beginning with a or ha unless the first syllable is stressed, nor is it used before a feminine adjective: la hacienda, 'the estate'; la alta casa, 'the high house.'

31. Negation.—A sentence is made negative by placing no, 'not,' before the verb.

no hablo, I do not speak, or I am not speaking.

no vendo flores, I do not sell flowers, or I am not selling flowers.

32. The English auxiliary 'do,' which is usual in negative or interrogative constructions, is ordinarily not translated into Spanish. Compare hablas, 'you speak'; no hablas, 'you do not speak'; ¿hablas? 'do you speak?' In past tenses, 'did' is similarly not expressed in Spanish.

¹ Do not translate. ² Use the definite article. For the article before the name of a language, cf. § 55 (4). ³ Use d.

LESSON III

33. Feminine of Adjectives. — Many Spanish adjectives change their form according as the noun they modify is masculine or feminine, singular or plural.

(1) Adjectives ending in -o in the masculine singular change -o to -a to form the feminine.

un caballo blanco, a white horse. una vaca blanca, a white cow.

(2) But adjectives ending in a consonant or in a vowel other than -o have the same form for the masculine and the feminine.

un hombre cortés, a polite man.

un muchacho inteligente, an intelligent boy.

una muchacha inteligente, an intelligent girl.

Exceptions: —

a. Adjectives of nationality ending in a consonant add -a to form the feminine: inglés, inglesa, 'English'; español, española, 'Spanish.'

b. Adjectives ending in -an, -on, or -or (except comparatives in -or) add -a to form the feminine: holgazán, holgazana, 'lazy'; burlón, burlona, 'roguish'; traidor, traidora, 'treacherous.'

Note that in Spanish a qualifying adjective usually follows its noun.

34. Plural of Adjectives.—The plural of adjectives, like the plural of nouns, is formed by adding -s or -es to the singular.

blanco, blancos, blanca, blancas, white.

35. Radical-changing e and o Verbs.¹—Many verbs of the first and second conjugations, while otherwise regular, change the radical vowels e and o to ie and ue respectively, whenever the stress falls on the stem. The following will serve as models of these verbs.

Present Indicative.

	Temblar, (to) tremble
SINGULAR		PLURAL
1. tiemblo		1. temblamos
2. tiemblos		2. tembláis
3. tiemblos		3. tiemblan
	Perder, (to) lose
SINGULAR		PLURAL
1. pierdo		1. perdemos
2. pierdes		2. perdéis
3. pierdes		3. pierden
	Contar, (to) count
SINGULAR		PLURAL
1. cuento		1. contamos
2. cuentas		2. contáis
3. cuenta		3. cuentan
	Volver, (to) return
SINGULAR		PLURAL
1. vuelvo		1. volvemos
2. vuelves		2. volvéis
3. vuelve		3. vuelven

Note that e becomes ie and o becomes ue only in the singular and the third person plural, since the stress falls on the inflectional endings of the first and second persons plural, and not on the stem.

¹ All verbs that make these phonetic changes will be found in the list of verbs, § 271.

lessons very easy. 23. The Spanish teacher speaks, reads, and writes Spanish⁷ well. 24. He does not speak, read, and⁸ write English well.

LESSON IV

36. Radical-changing Verbs. — Some verbs of the third conjugation change the radical e to ie or to i, and o to ue, whenever the stress falls on the stem.¹ The following will serve as models of these verbs: —

Present Indicative.

Sentir, (to) feel

SINGULAR	PLURAL
1. siento	1. sentimos
2. sientes	2. sentís
3. siente	3. sienten

Pedir, (to) ask for 37. The Irregular Verbs Tener and Haber.

Indicative. Present Tense.

Tener, (to) have
SINGULAR	PLURAL
1. tengo	1. tenemos
2. tienes	2. tenéis
3. tiene	3. tienen

Haber, (to) have
SINGULAR	PLURAL
1. he	1. hemos
2. has	2. habéis
3. ha (hay)	3. han

38. Meaning and Use of Tener and Haber.

(1) Tener means ' (to) have ' in the sense of ' (to) possess ' ; tengo una pluma, ' I have a pen. ' It also retains its Latin sense of ' (to) hold. '

(2) Haber is chiefly used as an auxiliary verb with past participles in the formation of compound tenses. Thus, the perfect tense of hablar is :

' I have spoken, ' or ' I have been speaking. '

SINGULAR	PLURAL
1. he hablado	1. hemos hablado
2. has hablado	2. habéis hablado
3. ha hablado	3. han hablado

*a. Hay*¹ means ' there is, ' or ' there are ' ; hay uno, ' there is one ' ; hay dos, ' there are two. ' The form hay is used only as an impersonal verb ; ha, not hay, is used in the formation of compound tenses, as, ha habido, ' there has been, ' and in temporal expressions, as mucho tiempo ha, ' there is much time, ' i.e. ' long ago. '

¹ Composed of ha, ' it has, ' and y, an old adverb meaning ' there. ' Cf. French il y a.

39. Participles.

hablar:	hablando, speaking,	hablado, spoken.
temer:	temiendo, fearing,	temido, feared.
vivir:	viviendo, living,	vivido, lived.
tener:	teniendo, having,	tenido, had.
haber:	habiendo, having,	habido, had.

40. Idiomatic Expressions.

- (1) tengo que, I have to, or I must.
 tengo que estudiar mucho, I have to (or 'I must') study a great deal.
 he de, I am to, I shall.¹
 ha de partir mañana, he is to leave tomorrow.
- (2) tengo calor, I am warm. tengo cuidado, I am careful.
 tengo mucho calor, I am very tengo los ojos cansados, my eyes warm. are tired.
 tengo frío, I am cold. tengo rota la pierna derecha, my tengo hambre, I am hungry. right leg is broken.
 tengo sed, I am thirsty. tengo diez años, I am ten years tengo sueño, I am sleepy. old (lit., 'I have ten years').
 tengo miedo, I am afraid. ¿cuántos años tienes? how old tengo prisa, I am in a hurry. are you?

Note that these expressions refer to the physical or mental condition of a person or animal, not of inanimate objects; e.g. 'the water is hot,' el agua está (from estar, 'to be') caliente, and not el agua tiene calor.

study much ; but, when I am sleepy, I cannot study. 18. I do not eat a great deal ; but, when I am hungry, I wish to eat. 19. When I am thirsty, I drink water or milk ; I do not drink tea or ⁶ coffee.

LESSON V

41. Personal Subject-Pronouns.

yo, I.	nosotros (-as), we.
tú, you.	vosotros (-as), you.
ella, she. }	ellos (-as), they.
él, he. }

a. Note that nosotros, vosotros, and ellos have the feminine forms nosotras, vosotras, and ellas.

b. Él and ella also mean 'it' when referring to things ; thus, speaking of árbol, 'it' is él ; and speaking of casa, 'it' is ella.

c. In Spanish, the subject-pronouns may usually be omitted.

42. Usted.—In familiar address, 'you' is tú (sing.), or vosotros (pl.) ; but in formal address, 'you' is usted (sing.), or ustedes (pl.), used with the third person singular or plural of the verb. Thus, in the singular, 'you have' is tú tienes, or usted tiene, and in the plural it is vosotros tenéis, or ustedes tienen. Usted is usually not omitted, although with a series of verbs of address it occurs only at intervals.

43. Possessive Adjectives.

mi (mis), my.	nuestro (-a, -os, -as), our.
tu (tus), your.	vuestro (-a, -os, -as), you.
su (sus), his, her, its, your.	su (sus), their, your.

a. 'Your': tu corresponds to tú, vuestro to vosotros (-as), and su to usted or ustedes.

44. Demonstrative Adjectives.

este (-a, -os, -as), this, these (near to or appertaining to the speaker or writer), this . . . of mine, etc.

ese (-a, -os, -as), that, those (near to or appertaining to the person addressed), that . . . of yours, etc.

aquel (aquella, -os, -as), that, those (remote from the person addressed), that . . . of his, hers, etc., or that . . . over there.

a. The possessive and demonstrative adjectives are usually repeated before each noun to which they refer.

mi padre y mi madre, my father and mother.

Vocabulary

These boys prefer to play marbles. 19. He wishes to take drawing lessons, but she prefers to take music lessons.

LESSON VI

45. The Irregular Verbs Ser and Estar.

(1) Indicative. Present Tense:

		Ser, (to) be
SINGULAR			PLURAL
1.	soy		1.	somos
2.	eres		2.	sois
3.	es		3.	son
		Estar, (to) be
SINGULAR			PLURAL
1.	estoy		1.	estamos
2.	estás		2.	estáis
3.	está		3.	están

(2) Participles:

ser:	siendo, being,	sido, been.
estar:	estando, being,	estado, been.

46. Meaning of Ser and Estar.

Ser and estar both mean '(to) be.' Ser expresses what is inherent or permanent; estar, what is accidental or temporary.

- Ex. la taza es de oro, the cup is of gold.
 la taza está limpia, the cup is clean.
 soy viejo y estoy enfermo, I am old and ill.
 es cojo, he is (permanently) lame.
 hoy está cojo, he is lame today.
 soy libre, I am free (a free man).
 ahora estoy libre, I am now free (disengaged).

a. Estar is also used to express position, whether temporary or permanent: mi hermano está en Méjico, 'my brother is in Mexico'; Méjico está en la América del Norte, 'Mexico is in North America.'

b. Ser alone permits of a predicate noun with it: su hermano es soldado, 'his brother is a soldier.'

c. Some adjectives have one meaning when used with ser and another meaning when used with estar.

ser bueno, (to) be good.

ser cansado, (to) be tiresome.

estar bueno, (to) be well.

estar malo, (to) be ill.

estar cansado, (to) be tired.

They are very well, thank you. 10. Who has arrived? It⁴ is my father. 11. Who is it⁴? It⁴ is he. 12. We are English, but we are always ill in England. 13. You (pl., form.) work much and play little, do you not?⁵ 14. Those windows are high and wide. 15. This building is large and high. 16. I am a pupil (masc.) in⁶ this school, and you (sing., fam.) are a pupil (fem.) in⁶ that school. 17. This teacher is very severe when I am bad. 18. Your (sing., fam.) brother has a gift for your sister. He is very kind. 19. My friend has been in Madrid this winter. 20. He has been very ill, but he is now well.

LESSON VII

48. Possessive Case (Genitive). — Spanish nouns have only one form for the singular and one for the plural: they have no ending that corresponds to the English 's. Possession is denoted by the preposition de, 'of.'

el libro del hombre, the man's book (lit., 'the book of the man').
la hermana de María, Mary's sister (lit., 'the sister of Mary').

a. The English possessive case is sometimes elliptical for 'the house, church, or shop of'; in Spanish the full construction occurs.

está en casa de mi tío, he is at my uncle's.
voy á la iglesia de San Pablo, I am going to Saint Paul's.
en la tienda de García, at Garcia's.

49. Indirect Object (Dative Case). — The indirect object is always expressed by á before the noun, without regard to its position.

María dió un libro á Pedro, Mary gave Peter a book, or Mary gave a book to Peter.

a. In Spanish, verbs meaning to take from or ask of are followed by the dative of the person.

pido un favor á mi madre, I ask a favor of my mother.
compré el caballo á mi primo, I bought the horse of my cousin.

50. Personal á. — In Spanish the preposition á, ‘to,’ is often required before the direct object of a verb. It is so required whenever the object is a proper noun, or any noun or pronoun¹ that denotes a specific person, higher animal, or personified thing.

Ex. Pablo ama á Sofía, Paul loves Sophia.
 he visitado á París, I have visited Paris.
 llama á su hijo, he is calling his son.

Compare the following :

hallé el libro, I found the book.

hallé al niño, I found the child.

busco un hombre (not specific) que hable² español, I am looking for a man who speaks Spanish.

conozco á un hombre que habla español, I know a man who speaks Spanish.

a. The “personal á” is usually omitted after tener, ‘to have’: tengo un padre y una madre, ‘I have a father and a mother.’ Observe also the following :

querer, to wish.

querer á, to like, to love.

perder, to lose.

perder á, to ruin.

b. The “personal á” is sometimes omitted when the verb governs an indirect object also : llevo el niño á su papá, ‘I am taking the child to his father.’ Also before a word beginning with the a sound : conozco aquel hombre, ‘I know that man.’

c. The preposition á is sometimes placed before the direct object merely to distinguish the latter from the subject : á la guerra sigue la paz, ‘peace follows war.’

51. Interrogative Sentences. — In an interrogative sentence the subject, if expressed, usually follows the verb, and if a compound tense is used, the subject usually follows the past participle.

¹ Except the personal pronouns me, te, etc., and the relative que.

- Ex. ¿habla Juan? does John speak? is John speaking?
 ¿habló Pablo? did Paul speak?
 ¿ha vendido usted su caballo? have you sold your horse?

LESSON VIII

52. Indicative. Imperfect and Preterite.

Hablar :

IMPERFECT TENSE
SINGULAR	PLURAL
1. hablaba, I was speaking or used to speak.	1. hablábamos
2. hablabas	2. hablabais
3. hablaba	3. hablaban
PRETERITE TENSE
SINGULAR	PLURAL
1. hablé, I spoke or did speak.	1. hablamos
2. hablaste	2. hablasteis
3. habló	3. hablaron

Temer :

IMPERFECT TENSE
SINGULAR	PLURAL
1. temía, I was fearing or used to fear.	1. temíamos
2. temías	2. temíais
3. temía	3. temían
PRETERITE TENSE
SINGULAR	PLURAL
1. temí, I feared or did fear.	1. temimos
2. temiste	2. temisteis
3. temió	3. temieron

Vivir :

IMPERFECT TENSE
SINGULAR	PLURAL
1. vivía, I was living or used to live.	1. vivíamos
2. vivías	2. vivíais
3. vivía	3. vivían
PRETERITE TENSE
SINGULAR	PLURAL
1. viví, I lived or did live.	1. vivimos
2. viviste	2. vivisteis
3. vivió	3. vivieron

Note that the accent remains on the same vowel throughout the imperfect tense; and that, in both tenses, the stress never falls on the stem.

53. Use of the Imperfect and Preterite Indicative. —

The imperfect indicative is used (1) to tell what was happening when something else intervened, or (2) to represent a state or action as protracted or habitual. The preterite is used to tell what happened on one or more occasions in the past without involving duration or extension of time.

llovía, y los caminos estaban malos, it was raining, and the roads were bad.

el año pasado fumaba mucho, last year I used to smoke a great deal.
no fumé ayer, I did not smoke yesterday.

vendí mi casa y compré otra, I sold my house and bought another.

yo escribía cuando Juan entró, I was writing when John entered.

mi padre tenía dos hermosos perros, pero los vendió, my father had two handsome dogs, but he sold them.

a. Sometimes 'I spoke,' 'I did speak,' or 'I would speak,' mean 'I used to speak.' They are then to be expressed in Spanish by the imperfect: hablaba español todos los días cuando estaba en Cuba, 'I spoke ('did speak,' 'would speak,' or 'used to speak') Spanish every day when I was in Cuba.'

b. In Spanish the perfect indicative is sometimes used instead of the preterite to express an act that occurred recently: ayer he matado un lobo, 'I killed a wolf yesterday'; ha partido anteayer, 'he left day before yesterday'; he creído que usted era francés, 'I thought that you were French.' This construction is not so common in Spanish America as it is in Spain.

⁷ à las seis de la mañana. ⁸ teniais. ⁹ los vendimos.

LESSON IX

54. Neuter Article Lo. — In addition to the forms of the definite article already given, there is another form, lo, which is required before the masculine form of an adjective, when the adjective is used substantively as the name of a color or as an abstract noun. This is generally called the neuter article, since it cannot be used with a masculine or a feminine noun.

se ruborizó hasta lo blanco de los ojos, he colored to the white of his eyes.

lo infinito y lo eterno, the infinite and the eternal.

a. Note also the following idiomatic expressions:

conocemos lo buenas qué son ellas, we know how good they are.

sabemos¹ lo mucho que nos quiere, we know how much he loves us.

55. Use of the Definite Article. — The definite article is used oftener in Spanish than in English. It is required in the following cases:

(1) Before an abstract noun, or one used in a general sense to denote all of the thing or class it names.

la ambición es peligrosa, ambition is dangerous. el hierro es útil, iron is useful.
ama las flores, he loves flowers.

But, if 'some' or 'any' is expressed or understood before the English noun, the article is omitted in Spanish.

no tiene ambición, he hasn't any ambition.
compra hierro, he is buying (some) iron.
compra flores, he is buying flowers.

(2) Before a title, or a proper noun modified by a descriptive adjective.

el señor Morales, Mr. Morales. la pequeña María, little Mary.
el general Martínez, General Martinez. el Asia rusa, Russian Asia.

But in direct address the article is omitted, and señor, señora, or señorita is usually prefixed to a title.

buenos días, señor general Martínez, good day, General Martinez.

a. The article is never used before Don or Doña²: Don Antonio habla, 'Anthony is speaking.'

² Don and Doña are used only before the Christian or given name (nombre de bautismo), as Doña María, 'Miss (or Mrs.) Mary.' One also meets with Señora Doña María, Señora Doña María Martínez, etc.

b. The article is required before a noun used in apposition with a personal pronoun (expressed or understood): nosotros los americanos creemos, or los americanos creemos, 'we Americans believe.'

(3) Before a word or expression of time that is modified.

llegó el martes de la semana pasada, he arrived (on) Tuesday of last week.

la semana próxima, next week.

(4) Before an adjective of nationality used to denote a language.

el inglés no es difícil, English is not difficult.

¿enseña usted el español? do you teach Spanish?

But after hablar, 'to speak' (sometimes after aprender), the article is usually omitted except before castellano.¹ After en, 'in,' the article is usually omitted.

hablamos francés, we speak French; en alemán, in German;

but, ¿hablas el castellano? do you speak Spanish?

(5) Usually before the unmodified names of countries and continents, except when the name is used with en, á, de, para, etc., to form an adjectival or adverbial phrase.

la Inglaterra, England;

la Francia, France, etc.;

but,

vivo en España, I live in Spain; voy á Italia, I am going to Italy.

a. The article is always required before the names of some countries and cities.

el Brasil, Brazil.

la China, China.

el Canadá, Canada.

la Florida, Florida.

el Ecuador, Ecuador.

la Gran Bretaña, Great Britain.

la Habana, Havana.

el Paraguay, Paraguay.

la Suiza, Switzerland, etc.

el Perú, Peru.

¹ Several languages are spoken in Spain: Castilian (el castellano), Catalan (el catalán), Galician (el gallego), etc.; but Castilian is the official language of Spain, and is therefore often called Spanish (el español), although in most Spanish-speaking countries the name Castilian (el castellano) is considered more correct.

(6) Usually before a noun denoting a bodily characteristic, when the object of tener, 'to have.'

tiene el pelo negro, he has black hair.
tengo los pies fríos, my feet are cold.

(7) The masculine article sometimes modifies an infinitive or a subject clause.

el comer demasiado es malo, it is bad to eat too much.
no puede ser mera casualidad el que sean todas bonitas, it cannot be mere chance that they are all pretty.

(8) The definite article is sometimes used instead of a possessive (see § 119), as in he perdido el sombrero, I have lost my hat.

⁴ para. ⁵ Say: 'the beautiful and the agreeable.' ⁶ Use Imp. Ind.
⁷ Say: 'The wicked (= bad) and the good.' ⁸ Say: 'I have the finger broken.' ⁹ ni.

LESSON X

56. Omission of the Definite Article. — The definite article is omitted in Spanish, although required in English.

(1) Usually before a noun in apposition.

Washington, capital de los Estados Unidos, Washington, the capital of the United States.

(2) Before a numeral modifying a title.

Carlos quinto, Charles the Fifth.

Luis diez y seis, Louis the Sixteenth.

57. Omission of the Indefinite Article. — The indefinite article is used less often in Spanish than in English: it is regularly omitted before an unmodified noun in the predicate used like an adjective to denote nationality, occupation, rank, etc.

es americano, he is an American. es sastre, he is a tailor.

es general, he is a general.

It is also usually omitted,

a. Before a noun in apposition: Sevilla, ciudad en Andalucía, 'Seville, a city in Andalusia.'

b. Before otro, 'another'; cierto, 'a certain'; ciento, 'a hundred'; mil, 'a thousand'; after tal, 'such a,' etc.

c. Note also such expressions as the following: dos pesos la botella, 'two dollars a bottle'; tres veces al día, 'three times a day'; mil pesos por año, 'a thousand dollars a (or per) year.'

58. Radical-changing Verbs. — The radical-changing e and o verbs of the third conjugation change the radical vowels e and o to i and u respectively in the third person singular and plural of the preterite.

LESSON XI

60. Position of Descriptive Adjectives.¹—In English a descriptive adjective used with a noun nearly always precedes it; in Spanish a descriptive adjective commonly follows its noun.

un muchacho fuerte, a strong boy.

una muchacha cubana, a Cuban girl.

ojos azules, blue eyes.

61. Most Spanish descriptive adjectives, however, may precede their noun, if the quality named by the adjective is characteristic of the noun, or if the language is poetic or figurative.

la Santa Biblia, the Holy Bible.

la blanca nieve, the white snow.

el ronco trueno, the hoarse thunder.

a. Many adjectives may usually be placed either before or after their noun, although an adjective is more literal and distinctive when it follows: bueno, 'good'; malo, 'bad'; bonito or lindo, 'pretty'; hermoso, 'beautiful' or 'handsome'; pequeño, 'small'; viejo, 'old,' etc.

una pequeña niña or una niña pequeña, a little girl.

un hermoso caballo or un caballo hermoso, a handsome horse.

b. The position of the adjective is sometimes determined by euphony, or the necessity of avoiding ambiguity; and an adjective which ordinarily follows its noun may stand before a noun modified by an adjective phrase.

cuatro magníficos caballos blancos, four splendid white horses.

los escasos honorarios del gobierno, the inadequate salaries of the government.

un patriótico libro de lectura cubano, a patriotic Cuban reader.

c. A few adjectives have one meaning before, and another after, their noun.

un grande amigo, a great friend.

diferentes personas, different una manzana grande, a large apple.

el pobre hombre, the poor man (an object of pity), vestidos diferentes, different (= dissimilar) costumes.

un hombre pobre, a poor (poverty-stricken) man.	un nuevo libro, another (or a different) book.
mi cara madre, my dear mother.	un libro nuevo, a new book (fresh from the press.)
una silla cara, a dear (expensive) chair.	varios hombres, several men.
cierta época, a certain period.	papeles varios, miscellaneous papers; etc.
noticia cierta, authentic news.

d. When the adjective precedes, it is usually repeated before each noun to which it refers.

mi viejo padre y mi vieja madre, my old father and mother.

e. An English noun used as an adjective is usually expressed in Spanish by a noun preceded by de (or para).

un reloj de oro, a gold watch.

un vaso para vino, a wineglass (un vaso de vino is a glass of wine).

62. Agreement of Adjectives.

(1) If an adjective modifies several singular nouns, the plural form of the adjective is used.

el padre y el hijo son buenos, the father and the son are good.

la madre y la hija son buenas, the mother and the daughter are good.

(2) If some of the nouns are masculine and some are feminine, the adjective is usually in the masculine plural.

el padre y la madre son buenos, the father and the mother are good.

la plata y el oro americanos, American silver and gold.

a. If the nouns denote inanimate things, and the noun nearest the adjective is feminine plural, the adjective takes the feminine plural form.

el escritorio y las sillas estaban rotas, the desk and chairs were broken;

su sombrero y sus botas son viejas, his hat and boots are old;

but,

mi corazón y mi alma son suyos, my heart and my soul are his.

b. Sometimes a plural noun is modified by several singular adjectives. This occurs when each adjective modifies only one of the individuals denoted by the noun: las lenguas inglesa y castellana, 'the English and Spanish languages.'

c. An adjective usually agrees in gender and number with the nearest noun if the nouns are disconnected: muestra un valor, una capacidad un talento extraordinario, 'he displays extraordinary courage, ability, talent.'

d. When an attributive adjective precedes its noun, it is repeated before each noun if the nouns denote distinct persons or things; if the nouns denote collectively a state or action, a group of persons or things, or designate the same person or thing, the adjective is not repeated, and agrees with the nearest noun.

la madre y la hija, the mother and (the) daughter.

una bella casa y un bello jardín, a beautiful house and garden.

su extremado talento y habilidad, his unusual talent and skill.

todos los maestros y discípulos, all the teachers and pupils.

el pie y pierna de los animales se llaman 'pata', the foot and lower part of the leg of animals are called 'pata.'

e. In Spanish a predicate adjective is often used where an adverb is used in English: partió alegre, 'he departed joyfully.'

LESSON XIII

66. Apocoptation of Adjectives. — The following adjectives lose the final o of the masculine singular when they precede their noun :

bueno, good.

uno,¹ one, an or a.

primero, first.

¹ The numeral uno and the indefinite article are the same word.

² Postrero is little used; 'last' is usually último (but 'last month,' for instance, is el mes pasado).

un buen hombre, a good man. algún día, some day.
mal café, bad coffee. el primer tomo, the first volume.

a. If bueno and malo are separated from their noun, they retain the final o: mi bueno y cariñoso padre, 'my good and affectionate father.'

67. Grande, used in the sense of 'grand' or 'great,' usually becomes gran before a singular noun of either gender.

un gran presidente, a great president. una gran cosa, a grand affair.

a. Before a noun beginning with a vowel, or when the adjective is emphatic, the full form is sometimes used.

un grande acto de caridad, a grand act of charity.
un grande sacrificio, a great sacrifice.

b. When grande means 'large' or 'big,' it follows its noun.

un muchacho grande, a big boy. una casa grande, a large house.

68. Santo, 'saint,' 'holy,' usually becomes san before the masculine name of a saint. The full form remains before a name beginning with To- or Do-.

San Pablo, Saint Paul. Santo Tomás, Saint Thomas.
San Pedro, Saint Peter. But the name of the island Santo Domingo, Saint Dominick. is San Tomás.

Otherwise the full form is used.

Santa Ana, Saint Anne. un hombre santo, a holy man.

69. Ciento, 'one hundred,' becomes cien before the noun it modifies, even if an adjective intervenes.

cien soldados, one hundred soldiers.
cien hermosos caballos, one hundred handsome horses.
cien mil pesos, one hundred thousand dollars.

But the full form ciento is required in forming numerical expressions above one hundred (except cien mil, cien millones, etc.).

ciento y diez, one hundred and ten.
ciento veinte y cinco, one hundred and twenty-five.

70. Numerals. — Learn the Cardinal Numerals, § 168; and the Ordinal Numerals from 'first' to 'twelfth,' § 169.

2. vivirías		2. viviríais
3. viviría		3. vivirían

a. The English auxiliary verb 'will' may denote future time, as in 'he will go tomorrow,' or it may express willingness, as in 'I will go if you wish.' When 'will' means 'to be willing,' it is generally to be translated into Spanish by the proper form of querer: ¿quiere usted venir con nosotros? 'will you come with us?' compraré la casa si quieres venderla, 'I shall buy the house if you will sell it.'

b. The auxiliary verb 'should' may be merely conditional, as in 'I should speak if I knew what to say,' or it may mean 'ought to,' as in 'I realize that I should (= ought to) speak, but I do not wish to do so.' When 'should' means 'ought to,' it is usually expressed in Spanish by the proper form of deber: yo debo (debiera) hablar, 'I should, or ought to, speak.'

Note that, except the first, the cardinal numbers are used to denote the days of the month.

73. In order to denote an act or state that continues from one period into another, the present, imperfect, and future tenses are used in Spanish; while in English the perfect, pluperfect, and future perfect tenses are used. Ex.:

hace quince años que vivimos en Madrid, we have been living in Madrid for a year.

hacía seis meses que vivíamos en Madrid, we had been living in Madrid for six months.

desde entonces vivíamos en Madrid, we had been living in Madrid since then.

hará² un año que viviremos en Madrid, we shall have been living in Madrid for a year.

mucho tiempo ha que vivimos en Madrid, we have been living in Madrid for a long time.

Compare these sentences with the following:

¹ After la una and media, hora is understood; after las dos, las tres, etc., horas is understood. Cuarto is a noun.

² Future indicative of hacer: cf. § 246.

hace un mes que partieron, it is a month since they left, or they left a month ago. hacía ocho días que habían partido, it was a week since they had left. hará un año que partieron, it will be a year since they left. poco ha que partieron, they left a little while ago.	hace ocho días que no he fumado, it is a week since I have smoked, or I have not smoked for a week. hacía diez años que no había fumado, it was ten years since I had smoked, or I had not smoked for ten years. desde entonces no he fumado, I have not smoked since then.
--	---

a. In expressions of time ha (sometimes written há) is generally used as an impersonal verb instead of hay; but hace is used much oftener than ha. As a rule, ha follows and hace precedes the noun (or adjective) denoting time. Ha is generally used in indefinite expressions of time, as poco ha, 'a short time ago'; while hace is more correct in definite expressions, as hace ocho días, 'a week ago.'

Exercise XIV

¹ 'he said.' ² Pres. Ind., 1st pers. sing., of suponer, 'to suppose.' ³ Pres. Ind. of ver, 'to see.' ⁴ Pret. of ver. ⁵ Past Part. of volver, 'to return.' ⁶ In Spain and Spanish America, the day of the saint after whom one is named is celebrated much oftener than one's birthday. 'My saint's day' is el día de mi santo, or mis días. ⁷ por él. ⁸ Place mañana first in the sentence. ⁹ si lo pidiera. ¹⁰ los (placed before the verb). ¹¹ Say: 'will your brother be slow (tardará) in returning?' (Infin.). ¹² para. ¹³ d hablarlo. ¹⁴ ella. ¹⁵ lo (placed before the verb). ¹⁶ Use queria (Imp. Ind. of querer). ¹⁷ Use Infin.

LESSON XV

74. Comparison. — Spanish adjectives form their comparative by prefixing más, 'more,' to the positive, and their superlative by prefixing the definite article to the comparative.

rico, más rico, el más rico,	} rich, richer, richest.
rica, más rica, la más rica, ricos, más ricos, los más ricos, ricas, más ricas, las más ricas,

a. A possessive adjective may be used instead of the article, to form the superlative: su amigo más rico, 'his richest friend.'

b. The article or the possessive adjective precedes the noun when the superlative adjective follows it: la flor más hermosa, 'the most beautiful flower.'

c. When several comparatives or superlatives modify the same word, más (or el más, la más, etc.) is placed before the first and omitted before the others: el árbol más alto y viejo, 'the tallest and oldest tree.'

d. Correlative 'the . . . the,' followed by comparatives, is expressed in Spanish by cuanto . . . tanto,¹ or by mientras . . . —: cuanto más dinero

gana, tanto más gasta, 'the more money he earns, the more he spends'; cuanto más viejo es el vino, tanto más vale, 'the older the wine is, the more it is worth'; mientras más tiene, más quiere, 'the more he has, the more he wants.'

e. The English preposition 'in' after a superlative is usually expressed in Spanish by de: el río más largo del mundo, 'the longest river in the world.'

f. The article is omitted before a superlative adjective in the predicate when its noun is compared with itself: esta mujer sonríe cuando está más triste, 'this woman smiles when she is saddest.'

g. When the noun is in apposition, both the article and the superlative follow the noun: Nueva York, ciudad la más opulenta de los Estados Unidos, 'New York, the wealthiest city in the United States.'

h. When there is no real comparison, 'most' is usually expressed by muy, or the suffix -ísimo: es muy útil, or utilísimo, 'it is most useful.'

75. (1) The adjectives bueno and malo are irregularly compared.

bueno, mejor, el mejor, good, better, best.

malo, peor, el peor, bad, worse, worst.

The regular comparative forms más bueno and más malo are sometimes used.

(2) Grande and pequeño, while usually compared regularly, have also the irregular comparative forms mayor and menor. When applied to persons, mayor means 'older,' and menor, 'younger.' Más grande and más pequeño are preferred for the literal and physical use.

Juan es más grande que Pedro, John is taller than Peter.

Juan es mayor que Pedro, John is older than Peter.

(3) Mucho and poco are compared irregularly, and in the superlative they are used only in the neuter singular and in the plural.

mucho, más, lo (los, las) más, much (many), more, most.

poco, menos, lo (los, las) menos, little (few), less, least.

las más noches, or las más de las noches, most nights.

lo menos que he perdido, the least that I have lost.

en vano buscan los más el bien que gozan los menos, in vain do the many seek for the happiness which the few enjoy.

a. 'Most,' used with a noun, is usually best expressed by la mayor parte de: la mayor parte de mis amigos, 'most of my friends' (lit., 'the greater part of my friends').

76. Spanish adverbs form both their comparative and superlative by prefixing más to the positive. There is usually no difference in form between the comparative and the superlative.

despacio, slowly.

más despacio, more (or most) slowly.

a. The neuter article lo is often prefixed to a superlative adverb when it is followed by a word or clause expressing possibility.

lo más pronto posible, the soonest possible, or as soon as possible.

lo más pronto que pudo, as soon as he could.

77. The following adverbs are compared irregularly :

bien, mejor, well, better or best.

mal, peor, badly, worse or worst.

mucho, más, much (a great deal), more or most.

poco, menos, little, less or least.

a. Más bien means 'rather': está cansado más bien que enfermo, 'he is tired rather than ill.'

78. Than is usually expressed in Spanish by que.

él es más alto que usted, he is taller than you.

tiene más libros que dinero, he has more books than money.

a. Before a numeral, 'more than' and 'less than,' meaning 'a greater number than' and 'a smaller number than,' are expressed by más de and menos de: hay más de cinco, 'there are more than five'; tiene menos de veinte años, 'he is less than twenty years old'; but el caballo es más fuerte que cinco hombres, 'a horse is stronger than five men,' since más does not here mean 'a greater number.'

b. No más . . . que usually means 'only.' Compare:

no gastaron más de cien pesos, they did not spend more than one hundred dollars.

no gastaron más que cien pesos, they spent only one hundred dollars.

c. Before a clause, 'than' is usually expressed by del (= de + el) que, and its declined forms, de la que, de los que, de las que, when the comparison is with a noun (expressed or understood) of the main clause; or by de lo que when the comparison is with a statement or idea.

me ha dado más dinero del que le presté, he has given me more money than (that which) I lent him.

tiene más libros de los que tenía, he has more books than (those which) he had.

es más rico de lo que crees, he is richer than (what) you believe.

d. But, if the action of one verb is compared with that of another, 'than' before a clause is que: habla más que trabaja, he talks more than he works.

79. Tan . . . como = as . . . as, or so . . . as.

Tanto (-a) . . . como = as much . . . as, or so much . . . as.

Tantos (-as) . . . como = as many . . . as, or so many . . . as.

tan blanco como la nieve, as white as snow.

tanto oro como plata, as much gold as silver.

no tiene tanta plata como oro, he hasn't so much silver as gold.

tantas manzanas como peras, as many apples as pears.

La vaca da más leche de la que daba el año pasado. 23. Tenemos menos criados de los que teníamos cuando usted nos visitó.⁴ 24. Él no sufre tanto como usted cree: no sufre tanto como ella.

B. 1. You (fam., sing.) are the best friend in the world. 2. No, I am not the best friend in the world. 3. I am the best friend that you have or have had. 4. He has more friends than I. 5. I have more books than he. 6. And my books are, and have always been, my best friends. 7. This house is larger than that house, but that house is the higher. 8. He is older than I, but not so old as my brother. 9. He is richer and more independent than you (form., sing.), but he is not so happy. 10. The more he works, the more he has; and the more he has, the more he spends. 11. London is the largest and the wealthiest city in the world, but it is not the most beautiful. 12. She is older than I, but I am taller than she. 13. He is the most unfortunate man that I know⁵; he has lost most of the money that he earned last month. 14. He is writing more slowly than you (form., sing.), but he is writing as fast as he can.⁶ 15. The firm of Gonzales Brothers has more employés than the firm of Herrera and Company. 16. Gonzales Brothers employ more than two hundred men. 17. Herrera and Company do not employ more than one hundred. 18. But the firm of Gonzales Brothers has less employés this year than it had last year. 19. He lent me⁷ five dollars more than I asked-for. 20. But he did not lend me so much as I wished.

 21. I have more than seven cents and less than nine. How many have I? 22. It is colder outdoors than I thought.⁸ 23. But it is not so cold today as it was yesterday.

⁵ que conozco. ⁶ puede. ⁷ me (before the verb). ⁸ creía.

LESSON XVI

80. Adjectives used Substantively. — In English, adjectives are sometimes used substantively; as, 'the old and the young.' This construction is commoner in Spanish than in English. If a noun is understood, the adjective takes the gender and number of the noun it represents. 'One,' or 'ones,' after the English adjective, is usually not to be translated into Spanish.

los ricos y los pobres, the rich and the poor.	prefiero el caballo negro al blanco, I prefer the black horse to the white one.

a. If the adjective is used substantively as the name of a color or as an abstract noun, it requires the article lo. See § 54.

81. The Plural Number. — (1) The masculine plural form of adjectives and pronouns may denote male and female beings considered collectively.

los viejos, the old men and the old women, or the old man and the old woman, or simply the old men.

ellos tienen miedo, they are afraid (referring to men and women, or to a man and a woman, or to men alone).

The plural of most nouns denoting male beings may be used in the same way.

los hermanos, the brothers and sisters, or the brother and the sister, or the brothers.

los padres, the fathers and mothers, or the father and the mother (= the parents), or the fathers.

(2) In treating collectively of a number of persons or things, a singular noun is generally used in Spanish to denote something that belongs to every member of a group if, in the case of each member, but one object of the kind is concerned.

los niños se lavaron la cara y las manos, the children washed their faces and hands.

todos los discípulos levantaron la mano, all the pupils raised their hands (i.e. each raised one of his two hands).

(3) Abstract nouns are frequently used in the plural in a concrete sense.

terneza, tenderness.

LESSON XVII

85. Imperative Mood.

	Hablar
SINGULAR		PLURAL
2. habla		2. hablad
	Temer
SINGULAR		PLURAL
2. teme		2. temed
	Vivir
SINGULAR		PLURAL
2. vive		2. vivid

With habla, teme, and vive, tú is understood; while vosotros (-as) is understood with hablad, temed, and vivid.

86. The imperative mood is limited to the second person singular and plural. It is also limited to positive commands or entreaties. See § 87, a.

a. The final -d of the plural imperative is lost before the object-pronoun os, 'you, yourselves' (cf. § 89): preparaos (for preparad-os), 'prepare yourselves.'

87. Subjunctive Present Tense.

	Hablar
SINGULAR		PLURAL
1. hable		1. hablemos
2. hables		2. habléis
3. hable		3. hablen
	Temer
SINGULAR		PLURAL
1. tema		1. temamos
2. temas		2. temáis
3. tema		3. teman
	Vivir
SINGULAR		PLURAL
1. viva		1. vivamos
2. vivas		2. viváis
3. viva		3. vivan

The present subjunctive is often used in Spanish to express command or entreaty.

hable él, let him speak. hablemos, let us speak.
hable ella, let her speak. que Juan hable, let John speak.

Note that the present subjunctive in these expressions is usually to be translated into English by 'let' and the infinitive; but when used with usted (or ustedes), it is translated by the imperative.

hable usted, speak. abra usted la puerta, open the door.

a. In the second person, singular and plural, the present subjunctive is used to express a negative command or entreaty, while in a positive command or entreaty the imperative is used; thus:

habla, or hablad, speak. no hables, or no habléis, do not speak.

b. The final -s of the first person plural of the present subjunctive is omitted before the object-pronoun nos, 'us,' 'ourselves': sentémonos (for sentemos-nos), 'let us seat ourselves.'

LESSON XVIII

89. Personal Pronouns. — The Spanish personal pronouns used as the subject or object of verbs are¹:

SINGULAR

	SUBJECT	DIRECT OBJECT	INDIRECT OBJECT
1.	yo, I.	me, me.	me, to me.
2.	tú, you, thou.	te, you, thee.	te, to you, to thee.
3.	{ m. él, he, it. f. ella, she, it.	le or lo, him, it. la, her, it.	le, to him, to her, to it. (la), (to her).

PLURAL

	SUBJECT	DIRECT OBJECT	INDIRECT OBJECT
1.	nosotros (-as), we.	nos, us.	nos, to us.
2.	vosotros (-as), you, ye.	os, you.	os, to you.
3.	{ m. ellos, } f. ellas, } they.	los, } las, } them.	les, to them. (las), (to them, f.).

a. In English a subject-pronoun is rarely omitted; in Spanish it is regularly omitted unless required for emphasis or clearness: hablo, 'I am speaking'; yo hablo, 'I am speaking.' The pronoun is sometimes required when the form of the verb would not make it clear what pronoun is understood; thus, yo (él, ella) hablaba, 'I (he, she) was speaking.'

b. In English an object-pronoun regularly follows the verb; in Spanish it usually precedes.

nos aman, they love us.

ella me teme, she fears me.

Antonio te da un libro, Anthony gives you a book.

If the sentence is negative, no immediately precedes the object-pronoun: ella no me teme, 'she does not fear me.'

c. But sometimes the object-pronoun follows the verb, and is attached to it so that the verb and pronoun form one word. This occurs when the pronoun is the object of an infinitive, a present participle, or a positive imperative (including the positive subjunctive used with imperative force).

temerle, (to) fear him;

llamándome, calling me;

cómpralo, buy it;

sentémonos, let us sit down;

but

no lo compres, do not buy it;

no nos sentemos, let us not sit down.

d. When a present participle or an infinitive is used with an auxiliary verb, the object-pronoun may usually either precede the auxiliary or follow its main verb.

me está aguardando or está aguardándome, 'he is waiting for me.'

la quiero ver or quiero verla, 'I wish to see her.'

e. If the sentence (or clause) begins with the verb, the object-pronoun may follow; but this rarely occurs if the verb is future, conditional, or the second person of the preterite.

ámame, he loves me;

amóme, he loved me;

amábame, he used to love me;

etc. (but rarely amaráme, amariame, amásteme, etc.).

f. In English one may say, 'give me the book,' or 'give the book to me'; both expressions are to be translated into Spanish by dame el libro, if the 'me' is not emphatic: cf. § 103, a.

g. It should be noted that the English pronouns 'him,' 'her,' and 'them' may be used as either direct or indirect object; and that, if used as direct object, they should be expressed in Spanish by one set of pronouns, while if used as indirect, they should be expressed by another set.

la teme, he fears her.

le da un libro, he gives her a book.

los ama, he loves them.

les da el libro, he gives them the book.

The masculine singular le, however, is used as either direct or indirect object.

h. In order to avoid ambiguity by indicating gender, the feminine direct object-pronoun (accusative) is sometimes used instead of the indirect object-pronoun (dative): él la (or las) quedó fiel hasta la muerte, 'he remained faithful to her (or them, fem.) till death.'

i. The masculine singular pronoun of the third person has two forms, le and lo. It is usually considered best to use le when referring to a person, and lo when referring to a thing; but some speakers and writers use only le, while others prefer lo.

Exercise XVIII

A. 1. Ella me teme, pero no me ama. 2. Yo la amo y la temo también. 3. Yo los buscaba, y ellos me buscaban. 4. Yo no los hallé, y ellos no me hallaron. 5. Tú las aborrecías, y ellas te aborrecían. 6. Did you see the boy? I saw him. 8. Did you (fam., sing.) see the boys? I saw them. 9. Did you see the girls? I saw them. 10. Did you (fam., pl.) find the book? We found it. 11. Did you find the pen? We found it. 12. Did you (fam., pl.) find the pens? We found them. 13. Did you find the books? We found them. 14. Did you (form., sing.) sell the house? I did not sell it, and I do not wish to sell it. 15. Did you (form., pl.) buy the carriage? We did not buy it, but we wish to buy it. 16. If you (fam., sing.) wish to buy the hat, buy it; if you do not wish to buy it, do not buy it. 17. If you (fam., pl.) wish to sell the bicycle, sell it; if you do not wish to sell it, do not sell it. 18. If you (form., sing.) prefer to sell the horses, sell them; if you do not prefer to sell them, do not sell them. 19. If you (form., pl.) prefer to buy the cows, buy them; if you do not prefer to buy them, do not buy them. 20. Did you (fam., sing.) speak to John? I did not speak to him, and I do not wish to speak to him. 21. Did you (fam., pl.) speak to Mary? We did not speak to Mary, but we wish to speak to her. 22. If you (form., sing.) wish to lend the boys ten dollars, lend them ten dollars; do not lend them more. 23. If you (form., pl.) prefer to lend the girls the pens, lend them the pens. 24. If you do not prefer to lend them the pens, do not lend them the pens.

⁴ 'anything.' ⁵ 'what.' ⁶ viste. ⁷ vi.

LESSON XIX

90. Tú and usted. — English 'you' may be expressed in Spanish by tú, pl., vosotros (-as), or by usted, pl., ustedes. Usted (pl., ustedes) is a contraction of vuestra merced, 'your grace'; it is treated as a noun and requires the verb, object-pronouns, and possessives in the third person singular or plural. Thus, addressing a woman one would say :

¿ como está usted ? how are you? (lit., 'how is your grace?').

yo la ví esta mañana, I saw you this morning (lit., 'I saw her,' referring to the noun element in usted).

ví también á su hermana, I saw your sister also (lit., 'I saw her sister').

It will be observed that usted has all the attributes of a noun except gender : it assumes the gender of the person addressed. Usted and ustedes may be abbreviated in writing to V. and VV., or to Vd. and Vds.

When 'you' stands for the name of a near relative, an intimate friend, a small child, an animal, or an inanimate object, it is usually to be translated by tú. The word tú corresponds also to English 'thou,' used in poetic and sacred language. The plural of tú is vosotros (-as). In all other cases 'you' should be expressed by usted (pl., ustedes). Thus it would be rude to address a stranger or mere acquaintance as tú; while, on the other hand, to address an intimate friend as usted would indicate scorn or anger.¹

a. Vosotros, instead of ustedes, is sometimes used by orators in addressing an audience.

¹ In some parts of the Spanish-speaking world vosotros and the corresponding form of the verb are no longer used in colloquial language. Thus, a Cuban or Mexican father would address one child as tú, but two or more as ustedes.

b. Nos and vos may occur, instead of yo and tú, in royal proclamations and official documents: nos el rey mandamos . . ., 'I, the king, command.' Vos instead of usted occurs commonly in the older Spanish works.

91. Ello and Lo.—There is no pronoun in Spanish exactly corresponding to English 'it.' All Spanish nouns are either masculine or feminine; hence, if 'it' represents a noun, it is expressed in Spanish by a masculine or feminine pronoun, according to the gender of the noun represented. Thus, speaking of el libro, 'it' would be él, lo, or le; while speaking of la pluma, 'it' would be ella, la, or le, according as 'it' is subject, direct object, or indirect object.

If 'it' does not represent a noun, but a whole phrase, sentence, or idea, it may be expressed by ello (subject-pronoun or object of a preposition) or lo (object-pronoun), as in convengo en ello, 'I agree to it,' no lo creo, 'I do not believe it.'

But 'it,' when the subject of a verb, is usually not expressed in Spanish at all. Thus, speaking of la casa, one would say, es muy alta, 'it is very high'; or speaking of something that happened, one would say, no es importante, 'it is not important.' If 'it' represents nothing definite, but is merely expletive, it can not be expressed in Spanish: llueve, 'it is raining'; nieva, 'it is snowing.'

a. As a subject-pronoun the neuter ello occurs commonly only in the expression ello es que (cf. the French c'est que) = 'the fact is that.'

b. Lo is often used in the predicate to refer to a preceding noun or adjective: ¿es él huérfano? — Sí, lo es, 'Is he an orphan? Yes; he is (one)'; sus ojos parecen negros sin serlo, 'his eyes appear black without being so.'

But if the preceding noun refers to a definite person, the personal pronoun agrees in gender and number with the noun: ¿eres tú la hija del señor García? — Sí, la soy, 'Are you the daughter of Mr. García? Yes; I am.'

LESSON XX

94. Subjunctive in Dependent Clauses. — The general difference between the Spanish indicative and subjunctive moods is that the indicative states or denies a fact, while the subjunctive expresses (1) a wish, (2) doubt or uncertainty, or (3) the cause of emotion.

95. The Spanish subjunctive may be used independently to express command or entreaty (as explained in Lesson XVII), but it is used much oftener in dependent clauses. There is no mood (or but few survivals of one; cf. 'if I were') in English corresponding to the Spanish subjunctive. In cases where the Spanish language requires the subjunctive in subordinate clauses, the English has generally the indicative, but sometimes the infinitive, the present participle, or the compound forms with 'should,' 'may,' or 'might.'

96. Some of the commoner uses of the dependent subjunctive are:

(1) After expressions of willing or forbidding.

quiero que él escriba la carta, I wish him to write the letter.¹

prohibo que entres, I forbid your entering.

(2) After expressions of doubting or fearing.

dudo que seas feliz, I doubt that (whether) you will be happy, or I doubt your being happy.

temo que no llegue á tiempo, I fear that he will not arrive in time.¹

A negative or an interrogative verb may express doubt: no creo que seas culpable, 'I do not believe that you are guilty'; ¿crees que yo sea culpable? 'do you believe that I am guilty?'

(3) After expressions of joy or sorrow.

siento que usted esté enfermo, I am sorry that you are ill.

me alegro de que estudies el inglés, I am glad that you are studying English.

(4) After expressions of necessity, and after impersonal expressions not stressing a fact.

es necesario que usted estudie mucho, it is necessary that you should study a great deal.²

es posible que yo vaya, it is possible that I may go; cf., es verdad que fué, it is true that he went.

(5) After certain conjunctions when the verb denotes future or indefinite time. The commonest of these conjunctions are:

para que, in order that.

antes que, before.

cuando, when.

hasta que, until.

mientras or mientras que, while, as long as.

aunque, although, even if.

luego que, as soon as.

para que lo creas, in order that you may believe it.

mientras dure la vida, as long as life lasts.

² But, es necesario estudiar mucho, 'it is necessary to study much.' The infinitive is used here because its subject is not expressed and the obligation is a general one.

no lo vendas antes que yo llegue, do not sell it before I arrive.
 no lo acabaré aunque trabaje todo el día, I shall not finish it although (even if) I work all day.¹

(6) After a relative with an indefinite antecedent (subjunctive of characteristic).

busco un hombre que hable español, I am looking for a man who speaks Spanish.	no encuentro á nadie que hable español, I do not find any one who speaks Spanish.
---	---

Note also the following :

a. The present subjunctive may denote either present or future time.

b. Que is rarely omitted in Spanish : teme que no lleguemos á tiempo, 'he fears (that) we shall not arrive on time.'

But it is sometimes omitted after verbs denoting request, permission, etc.

te suplico tengas la bondad de decírmelo, I beg you to be kind enough to tell me.

permítame le diga que no es verdad, let me tell you that it is not so.

97. Idiomatic Expressions.

por malo que sea, however bad he may be.	sea lo que sea, whatever it may be.
--	-------------------------------------

por más dinero que gane, lo gasta todo, whatever money he earns, he spends it all.	dure que dure, however long it may last; let it last as long as it will.

LESSON XXI

98. Prepositional Forms of the Personal Pronouns. — When personal pronouns are governed by a preposition, the following forms are used:

	SINGULAR	PLURAL
1st Pers.	mí, me.	nosotros (-as), us.
2d Pers.	ti, you, thee.	vosotros (-as), you.
3d Pers. { Masc.	él, him, it. }	ellos (-as), them.
{ Fem.	ella, her, it. }
	ello, it (referring to an idea or statement).

Note that these are the same in form as the subject-pronouns, with the exception of mí and ti.

Usted and sí, 'himself,' 'herself,' etc., are also used with prepositions.

compré el caballo para ti (para usted), I bought the horse for you.
quiero hablar con él (con ella), I wish to speak with him (with her).

a. When con, 'with,' governs mí, ti, or sí, the preposition and the pronoun unite to form one word, and the combination ends with the syllable -go: conmigo, 'with me'; contigo, 'with you'; and consigo, 'with himself' (herself, etc.).¹

99. Subjunctive. Imperfect Tenses.

(1) Regular Verbs.

Hablar :

SINGULAR		PLURAL
	First Form
1. hablase		1. hablásemos
2. hablastes		2. hablaseis
3. hablase		3. hablasten
	Second Form
1. hablara ²		1. habláramos
2. hablaras		2. hablarais
3. hablara		3. hablaran

Temer :

SINGULAR		PLURAL
	First Form
1. temiese		1. temiésemos
2. temieses		2. temieseis
3. temiese		3. temiesen
	Second Form
1. temiera		1. temiéramos
2. temieras		2. temierais
3. temiera		3. temieran

¹ In early Spanish, 'with me,' 'with thee' 'with himself' (etc.), were migo, tigo, sigo (from Latin, mecum, tecum, secum). Later, con was prefixed, so that the modern forms conmigo, contigo, consigo, express 'with' twice.

² The imperfect subjunctive in -ra is derived from the Latin pluperfect indicative [ama(ve)ra(m) > amara], and it is sometimes still used in Spanish, with the force of an indicative pluperfect or preterite.

Vivir :

SINGULAR		PLURAL
	First Form
1. viviese		1. viviésemos
2. vivieses		2. vivieseis
3. viviese		3. viviesen
	Second Form
1. viviera		1. viviéramos
2. vivieras		2. vivierais
3. viviera		3. vivieran

Note that the imperfect subjunctive has two forms, that in -se and that in -ra. In dependent clauses there is usually little choice between the two. The form in -se is perhaps used the oftener in Spain, while in some parts of Spanish America only the form in -ra is in common use.

(2) Radical-changing Verbs.

THIRD CONJUGATION

Sentir :

SINGULAR		PLURAL
	First Form
1. sintiese		1. sintiésemos
2. sintieses		2. sintieseis
3. sintiese		3. sintiesen
	Second Form
1. sintiera		1. sintiéramos
2. sintieras		2. sintierais
3. sintiera		3. sintieran

Pedir :

SINGULAR		PLURAL
	First Form
1. pidiese		1. pidiésemos
2. pidieses		2. pidieseis
3. pidiese		3. pidiesen
	Second Form
1. pidiera		1. pidiéramos
2. pidieras		2. pidierais
3. pidiera		3. pidieran

Dormir :

SINGULAR		PLURAL
	First Form
1. durmiese		1. durmiésemos
2. durmieses		2. durmieseis
3. durmiese		3. durmiesen
	Second Form
1. durmiera		1. durmiéramos
2. durmieras		2. durmierais
3. durmiera		3. durmieran

a. The subjunctive imperfect tenses are built up on the same stem as that of the third person, singular or plural, of the preterite. This is true of all irregular verbs.

b. The radical-changing e and o verbs of the first and second conjugations are regular in the imperfect subjunctive.

c. The -ra subjunctive is sometimes called the Conditional Subjunctive. Note that the accent remains on the same vowel throughout the two imperfect subjunctives.

100. In dependent clauses the imperfect subjunctive is used instead of the present, when the verb of the main clause is past. Compare the following sentences :

deseo que él escriba la carta, I wish him to write the letter.

desearé que él escriba la carta, I shall wish him to write the letter.

deseaba que él escribiese, or escribiera, la carta, I wished (was wishing) him to write the letter.

deseé que él escribiese, or escribiera, la carta, I wished him to write the letter.

prohibo que entres, I forbid your entering.

prohibiré que entres, I shall forbid your entering.

prohibía que entrases, or entraras, I forbade (was forbidding) your entering.

prohibí que entrases, or entraras, I forbade your entering.

temo que usted no llegue á tiempo, I fear that you will not arrive on time.

temeré que usted no llegue á tiempo, I shall fear that you will not arrive on time.

temía que usted no llegase, or llegara, á tiempo, I feared (was fearing) that you would not arrive on time.

temí que usted no llegase, or llegara, á tiempo, I feared that you would not arrive on time.

101. Sequence of Tenses. — A present or future tense in the main clause is followed by the present subjunctive, and a past tense by the imperfect. (See the examples given in the preceding paragraph.)

a. The perfect and the conditional are followed by the present or imperfect subjunctive according to the meaning of the sentence.

el general ha mandado que los prisioneros sean fusilados, the general has commanded that the prisoners (should) be shot.

ayer he escrito á Juan que volviese (volviera) á casa, yesterday I wrote to John to return home.

preferiría que usted la escribiese (escribiera), I should prefer that you (should) write it.

podría creer que esté enfermo, I could believe that he is ill.

b. After a present or a future tense the imperfect is used to denote a past action: siento que usted no llegase, or llegara, á tiempo, I am sorry that you did not arrive on time.

Exercise XXI

A. 1. Nuestra madre compró este libro español para ti y no para mí. 2. Quiere trabajar contigo y conmigo, pero no con él. 3. Cartero; ¿tiene usted algo para mí? 4. Sí, señor; tengo cartas para usted y periódicos y un paquete grande para su señor padre. 5. ¿Te permitieron las señoras que las acompañases (or acompañaras)? 6. Sí, señor; usted prohibió que yo fumara (or fumase) tabaco, y no fumaré más. 20. Les aconsejé que estudiasen (or estudiaran) el castellano; pero no querían estudiar ningún⁶ idioma extranjero. 21. Mi tío me aconsejó que no llevara (or llevase) todo mi dinero conmigo. 22. Me dijo que no llevaba nunca⁷ todo su dinero consigo. 23. Copiaré la carta para que mi padre la lea. 24. Dijo que copiaría la carta para que su padre la leyese⁸ (or leyera). 25. Cuando llegamos al palacio, no había portero ni criados que impidiesen (or impidieran) la entrada. 26. Prometí pagarme cien pesos cuando tuviese (or tuviera) el dinero. 27. Le escribí que no vendiese (or vendiera) el ganado antes que yo llegara (or llegase); pero lo vendió antes que yo llegué.

B. 1. He has presents for you (fam., sing.) and for her, and she has presents for him and for me. 2. They (masc.) can't⁹ live without us (fem.), and we can't¹⁰ live without them. 3. I am content with you (fam., sing.) and with her, but I am not content with him. 4. This house is very large, and many people live in it. 5. This tree is very high, and there are many birds in it. 6. We (fem.) run and play a great deal, but what harm is there in it? 7. My father says¹¹ it is a pity that I don't study more. 8. He says it is a pity that I didn't study more last year. 9. It is true that I don't study much: I should study more. 10. We were very sorry, ladies, that you did not permit Mr. Navarro to accompany you. 11. My mother wished to speak to the stranger, but my father did not wish her to speak to him. 12. Did you (fam., pl.) believe that Mr. Herrera would leave for¹² Madrid today? 13. Yes; we believed that he would leave today, and he has already left. 14. She asked me to pardon her, and I promised to pardon her. 15. Therefore, I shall pardon her. 16. Wasn't it necessary to lie? No; it wasn't necessary for you (fam., sing.) to lie. Never¹³ lie. 17. He asked me to wait here until he returned, and I did wait until he returned.¹⁴ 18. My father has forbidden my running and playing so-much.¹⁵ 21. He had already forbidden my smoking tobacco. 22. Your (fam., sing.) mother would prefer that you return home at once. She wishes to see you. 23. John, I bought this book that¹⁶ you (fam., sing.) might read it, and I wish you to read it. 24. My mother said that she had bought the book that I might read it, and she wished me to read it. 25. I shall pay the bill whenever¹⁷ the tailor desires me to pay it. 26. He said that he would pay the bill whenever the tailor desired him to pay it; but he hasn't paid it yet.

¹⁶ para que. ¹⁷ cuando.

LESSON XXII

102. When a verb has two personal pronoun objects, the indirect precedes the direct object.

me lo da , he gives it to me.	os las da , he gives them to you.
te la da , he gives it to you.	dámelo , give it to me.
nos los da , he gives them to us.	dánoslos , give them to us.

a. If both pronoun objects are in the third person, se is used as indirect object in the place of le or les. Thus, instead of either le lo da, or les lo da, one says se lo da. This se is derived from an old dative form of the personal pronoun of the third person,¹ and is in no way related to the reflexive pronoun se.

b. When the direct object is a pronoun of the first or the second person, the indirect object is usually separated from the verb and assumes the prepositional form after á, 'to.'

me presenta á ellos , he presents me to them.
te presenta á mí , he presents you to me.
nos presentan á usted , they present us to you.
preséntame á él , present me to him.

103. Each of the indirect object-pronouns le, les, and se (= le or les) has several meanings: hence, to avoid ambiguity, it is often necessary to use two pronouns to express the same idea,—an indirect object-pronoun and the corresponding prepositional form with á.

le da el libro á él (á ella, á usted), he gives the book to him (to her, to you).

les da la casa á ellos (á ellas, á ustedes), he gives the house to them, masc. (to them, fem.; to you, plur.).

se lo da á él (á ella, á usted, á ellos, á ellas, á ustedes), he gives it to him (to her, to you, to them, masc.; to them, fem.; to you, plur.).

a. This double construction is also used with either direct or indirect object-pronouns of the first, the second, or the third person, to add emphasis.

The pronouns me, te, le, la, lo, nos, os, los, las, les, and se can not be made emphatic by being stressed: 'give it to me,' with the stress on 'me,' can not be translated by dámelo, with the stress on me, but must be expressed by dámelo á mí, with the stress on mí.

te lo da á tí, he gives it to you. me quiere educar á mí también, he dánosla á nosotros, give it to us. wishes to educate me too.

The prepositional pronoun may precede the verb (except an imperative), and it is then still more emphatic.

á mí me lo da, he gives it to me.

This usage is often extended to nouns: á mi padre no le gusta, 'it doesn't please my father.'

3. hubiera hablado		3. hubieran hablado

a. Hubiese and hubiera, used impersonally, mean 'there might be,' etc.; hubiese, or hubiera, habido, 'there might have been.'

106. A present condition "contrary to fact" may be expressed in either one of the following ways :

si tuviese, or tuviera, dinero, lo compraría, } if I had money, I should si tuviese, or tuviera, dinero, lo comprara, } buy it.

Note that the imperfect subjunctive in -ra may occur in the result (apodosis) as well as in the condition (protasis), while the imperfect in -se occurs only in the condition, and the conditional indicative only in the result.

a. The condition may, of course, either precede or follow the result :
si tuviese tiempo, iría, 'if I had time, I should go,' or iría si tuviese tiempo, 'I should go if I had time.'

b. The conjunction si is sometimes followed by a conditional indicative, and si then means 'whether': no supe si vendría, 'I did not know whether he would come.'

107. Idiomatic Expressions.

¡ojalá que viva mil años! oh, that he may, or I hope he will, live a thousand years!

LESSON XXIII

108. Se and Sí. — The reflexive pronouns se and sí are masculine or feminine, singular or plural. Se is used as the direct or indirect object of a verb; sí as the object of a preposition. Whenever the subject of a verb is a noun or a pronoun of the third person, and is represented as acting, either directly or indirectly, on itself, se is used as the object-pronoun and sí as the prepositional form.

él se alaba, he praises himself.
usted se engaña, you deceive yourself.

Antonio se compró un sombrero, Anthony bought himself a hat.

a. Reflexive se, whether direct or indirect object, always precedes another object-pronoun: se me figura, 'it seems to me.' (Here se is the direct, me the indirect, object.)

109. In the first and second persons there is no especial form of reflexive pronoun, but the object-pronouns may become reflexive. Thus, the indicative present tense of engañarse, 'to deceive one's self,' is me engaño, I deceive myself.

te engañas, you deceive yourself.
se engaña, he (she) deceives himself (herself).

nos engañamos, we deceive ourselves.
os engañáis, you deceive yourselves. [selves.
se engañan, they deceive them-

a. If English 'myself,' 'ourselves,' 'thymself,' etc., are emphatic, they are to be expressed in Spanish by the reflexive pronoun in the prepositional form, modified by mismo (-a, -os, -as).

me engaño á mí mismo, I deceive myself.
usted se engaña á sí mismo, you deceive yourself.
Onofre habla siempre de sí mismo, Onofre is always talking about himself.

In these expressions propio may replace mismo.

ella se ama á sí propia, she loves herself.

b. Many verbs require the reflexive construction in Spanish, but not in English.

acostarse, (to) go to bed (lit., 'to recline one's self').

levantarse, (to) arise, or to get up (lit., to raise one's self').

sentarse, (to) sit down, or to be seated (lit., 'to seat one's self').

hacerse, or ponerse, (to) become.

acordarse (de), (to) remember.

olvidarse, (to) forget.

alegrarse (de), (to) rejoice (at),
or (to) be glad (of).

atreverse (á), (to) dare.

reírse (de), (to) laugh (at), etc., etc.

c. Some intransitive verbs may be used as reflexives, with change of meaning.

ir, (to) go.

dormirse, (to) fall asleep.

irse, (to) go away.

morir, (to) die.

dormir, (to) sleep.

morirse, (to) be dying, etc.

d. The reflexive construction is often used in Spanish where the passive voice is required in English.

se dice, it is said.

aquí se habla español, Spanish is spoken here.

e. The direct reflexive substitute for the passive is usually to be avoided if there is a personal subject. Thus, se admira el hombre means 'the man admires himself,' and not 'the man is admired'; but one can say, se admira al hombre, 'the man is admired,' se la trata con distinción, 'she is treated with distinction,' se te llama, 'some one is calling you,' etc. If a masculine pronoun of the third person is used, it is in the dative.

se les admira, they are admired.

110. In the plural a reflexive verb may become reciprocal; that is, several persons or things may be represented as acting on one another. Usually no distinction of form is made in Spanish between reflexive and reciprocal verbs; thus, nosotros nos engañamos may mean 'we deceive ourselves,' or 'we deceive one another.' Often, however, the meaning determines whether the verb is reflexive or reciprocal, as in la primera vez que se vieron y se hablaron, 'the first time they saw each other and spoke to each other.'

a. A reciprocal verb may be strengthened and made explicit by the use of el uno al otro (la una á la otra, los unos á los otros, las unas á las otras, or el uno á la otra, la una al otro, etc.).

os engañáis el uno al otro, you deceive each other.

se aman las unas á las otras, they love one another.

se burlan el uno del otro, they make fun of each other.

The article may be omitted, as in se aborrecen unos á otros, 'they hate one another.'

111. The following facts should also be noted :

a. The ethical dative, or "dative of interest," is much commoner in Spanish than in English.

me tomo la libertad, I take the liberty. la gata cogió un ratón y se me lo temo, I fear so. lo comió, the cat caught a mouse and ate it.
no te lo mates, do not kill him.

b. The forms la and las (cosa or a similar word being understood) may be used with the force of an indefinite pronoun.

el me la habrá de pagar, he will pay me for it.

los pretendientes se las prometen siempre felices, suitors always promise themselves happiness.

PLURAL

1. hubiéremos hablado
2. hubiereis hablado
3. hubieren hablado

a. Hubiere is also used as an impersonal verb.

114. Use of the Hypothetical Subjunctive.

The hypothetical subjunctive always denotes a condition or hypothesis. Like the present subjunctive, it denotes either present or future time. In the spoken Spanish of today the hypothetical subjunctive is rarely used except in proverbs, legal expressions, etc. Its place is regularly taken by the present subjunctive, or by the present indicative if used with si, 'if.'

si tal pensare (piensa), se engaña, if he thinks so, he is mistaken.

si lo hubiere (ha) dicho, ha mentido, if he has said so, he has lied.

si tuviere (tengo) dinero, lo compraré, if I have money, I shall buy it.

mientras durare (dure) la vida, trabajaré, as long as life lasts, I shall work.

créelo si quisieres (quieres), believe it if you wish.

es necesario aceptar lo que nos dieran (den), it is necessary to accept what they give us.

115. In Spanish the commoner forms of conditional sentences are as follows :

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. gasto mucho si gano mucho, I spend much if I earn much. | mucho, I should spend much if I earned much. |
| 2. gastaré mucho si gano (ganare) mucho, I shall spend much if I earn much. | 7. gastara mucho si ganase mucho, I should spend much if I earned much. |
| 3. gastaba mucho si ganaba mucho, I spent much if I earned much. | 8. gastara mucho si ganara mucho, I should spend much if I earned much. |
| 4. gasté mucho si gané mucho, I spent much if I did earn (earned) much. | 9. he gastado mucho si he ganado mucho, I have spent much if I have earned much. |
| 5. gastaría mucho si ganase mucho, I should spend much if I earned much. | 10. había gastado mucho si había ganado mucho, I had spent much if I had earned much. |
| 6. gastaría mucho si ganara | |

116. When the verb of the conclusion (apodosis) is thrown into the subjunctive, the present and future indicative become the present subjunctive ; the imperfect, preterite, and conditional indicative become the imperfect subjunctive ; and the perfect and pluperfect indicative become the perfect and pluperfect subjunctive respectively. Thus (cf. parallel sentences in preceding paragraph) :

- | | |
|--|---|
| 1. teme que yo gaste mucho si gano mucho, he fears that I spend much if I earn much. | 4. teme que yo gastara (gastase) mucho si gané mucho, he fears that I spent much if I did earn (earned) much. |
| 2. teme que yo gaste mucho si gano (ganare) mucho, he fears that I shall spend much if I earn much. | 5, 6, 7, 8. teme que yo gastara (gastase) mucho si ganase (ganara) mucho, he fears that I should spend much if I earned much. |
| 3. teme que yo gastara (gastase) mucho si ganaba mucho, he fears that I spent much if I earned much. | |

9. teme que yo haya gastado mucho si he ganado mucho, he fears that I have spent much if I have earned much.
10. teme que yo hubiera (hubiese) gastado mucho si había ganado mucho, he fears that I had spent much if I had earned much.

Note that the verb of the condition (protasis) is not attracted into the subjunctive in 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, and 10.

LESSON XXIV

117. Possessive Adjectives.

SINGULAR

1st Pers. mío (-a, -os, -as) or mi (mis), my.
 2d Pers. tuyo (-a, -os, -as) or tu (tus), your, thy.
 3d Pers. suyo (-a, -os, -as) or su (sus), his, her, its, your.

PLURAL

1st Pers. nuestro (-a, -os, -as), our.
 2d Pers. vuestro (-a, -os, -as), your.
 3d Pers. suyo (-a, -os, -as) or su (sus), their, your.

a. Before nouns, the apocopated forms mi, tu, and su are used; and after nouns the full forms, mío, tuyo, and suyo. Nuestro and vuestro are used either before or after nouns.

b. Mío (mi) is the possessive corresponding to yo, tuyo (tu) corresponds to tú, nuestro to nosotros (-as), vuestro to vosotros (-as), and suyo (su) to él, ella, ellos (-as), usted, and ustedes.

118. Possessive adjectives regularly precede their noun, and agree in gender and number with the thing possessed, not with the possessor.

nuestro caballo, our horse.

nuestra casa, our house.

nuestros caballos, our horses.

nuestras casas, our houses.

a. In certain indefinite expressions, and sometimes when emphatic, the possessive follows its noun.

cierto amigo mío, a certain friend of mine.

algunos discípulos nuestros, some pupils of ours.

los vicios tuyos, your vices.

b. In direct address, mío is generally used with an unmodified noun in the singular, and either mi or mío with a noun modified by an adjective.

amigo mío, my friend.

mi querido amigo, or querido amigo mío, my dear friend.

119. When the thing possessed forms part of the possessor, and is the object of a verb, the possessive adjective is generally replaced by an indirect object-pronoun and the definite article.

me corté el dedo, I cut my finger.

se quitó el sombrero, he took te salvó la vida, he saved your life.

off his hat.

The same usage obtains with nouns.

(le) salvó la vida á su amigo, he saved his friend's life.

el viento (le) llevó el sombrero al cochero, the wind carried away the driver's hat.

voy á romper (le) la cabeza á ese abogado, I am going to break that lawyer's head.

a. When the possessor is the subject of the verb, and no ambiguity is possible, the pronoun is omitted and the definite article alone is used instead of a possessive adjective.

perdí el sombrero, I lost my hat.

la niña abrió los ojos y levantó la cabeza, the girl opened her eyes and raised her head.

tengo los pies mojados y fríos, my feet are wet and cold.

120. Infinitive.

(1) 'To' before an infinitive is either not expressed in Spanish, or it is expressed by á or de.

quiero hablar con usted, I wish to speak with you.

éspero llegar á tiempo, I hope to arrive on time.

aprende á escribir, he is learning to write.

estoy obligado á trabajar mucho, I am obliged to work a great deal.

trataré de hacerlo, I shall try to do so.

tengo vergüenza de pedirlo, I am ashamed to ask it.

a. Most verbs (especially the "modal auxiliaries," deber, querer, etc.) take no preposition before a following infinitive; á is required after a verb of beginning, teaching, and learning, and after most verbs of motion, before a following infinitive; de is often used to connect a noun or adjective with a following infinitive, and is found occasionally between verbs (tratar de ver, alegrarse de ir, etc.).

b. But 'to,' meaning 'in order to,' is para: como para vivir: no vivo para comer, 'I eat to live: I do not live to eat.'

(2) After a preposition, the English present participle¹ is to be translated usually by the Spanish infinitive.

partió sin decir adiós, he left without saying good-bye.

estoy cansado de leer, I am tired of reading.

(3) Used as a noun, the infinitive usually takes the definite article.

el comer es indispensable, (to) eat (or eating) is indispensable.

el saber es útil, knowledge is useful.

121. Present Participle.¹—The present participle is invariable; that is, it may agree, without changing its form, with a masculine or feminine, a singular or plural, noun.

hablando así las niñas . . ., the girls speaking thus gana el pan cosiendo y bordando, she earns her bread (by) sewing and embroidering.

a. We have seen that hablo means 'I speak,' 'I do speak' (emphatic), or 'I am speaking' (progressive); hablaba means 'I was speaking' (progressive) or 'I used to speak'; hablaré means 'I shall speak' or 'I shall be speaking' (progressive), etc. But progressive action may also be expressed in Spanish by estar and the present participle: estoy hablando, 'I am speaking'; estaba hablando, 'I was speaking'; estaré hablando, 'I shall be speaking,' etc. The progressive form with estar, however, is used less often, and is more emphatic, than the English progressive form with 'be.' It is rarely used with the present participles of ser, estar, ir, venir, and many other verbs. Instead of estar, the verbs ir, venir, andar, are sometimes used to form a periphrastic progressive tense: va oscureciendo, 'it is growing dark.'

122. Past Participle. — Past participles used as adjectives are inflected like adjectives.

mi amada patria, my beloved country.

las cartas están acabadas, the letters are finished.

When used to form the perfect tenses, past participles are invariable.

mi madre ha venido, my mother has come.

las manzanas que he comprado son buenas, the apples that I have bought are good.

a. The following otherwise regular verbs have irregular past participles:

abrir, (to) open.

cubrir, (to) cover.

escribir, (to) write.

imprimir, (to) print.

abierto, opened.

cubierto, covered.

escrito, written.

impreso, printed.

123. Idiomatic Expressions.

- (1) á fé mía, upon my word.
 á pesar nuestro, in spite of us (ourselves).
 no es culpa mía, it is not my fault.
- (2) al leer la carta, upon reading the letter.
 al leer yo la carta, upon my reading the letter.

Exercise XXIV

A. Algunos historiadores han creído hallar el origen de los Indios americanos en aquellas diez tribus de Israel que fueron conquistadas por un rey de Asiria, unos setecientos años antes de Cristo. Muchos de los vencidos fueron llevados en cautiverio y, mezclándose con los conquistadores, perdieron su nacionalidad. Pero, según dice¹ Esdras, hubo algunos que formaron el proyecto de abandonar la multitud de los Gentiles é irse á un lejano país en donde los hombres nunca habían morado. Algunos opinan que los desgraciados restos de estas tribus llevaron á cabo su designio, pasando á la América, y que fueron los progenitores de la raza india. La historia sólo dice que avanzaron hasta la Media, y fuera de esto no sabemos nada más de sus viajes, ni aparece prueba alguna de que se estableciesen finalmente en la América, excepto una pequeña semejanza entre las costumbres y ceremonias religiosas de los Indios y los antiguos Israelitas. Ambos tenían sus sacerdotes y profetas, sus fiestas, festines y sacrificios. Pero ni estos ni otros puntos de semejanza que se alegan son bastantes para probar la teoría.

B. 1. Certain plans of yours are good, but our designs are better. 2. In a letter which he has written, John says to me: "My dear friend: I am proving a resemblance between the Indians and the ten tribes of Israel." 3. They know that it is not your fault, but they are tired of carrying out your theories. 4. Before leaving the land of the Gentiles the tribes had lost their nationality. 5. To form a plan is easy; to carry it out is difficult. 6. John lost his life in America. 7. The wind has carried off the man's hat. 8. When I had (preterite) opened my eyes, I spoke to the Indians. 9. Raising his head, the boy who was weeping said²: "I have cut my hand." 10. Our letter is³ written. We are sending the letter and a present to our beloved sister. 11. Some friends of his have printed his book of poems. 12. We were speaking to a certain pupil of yours. 13. Upon my word, it is not our fault that the door is³ open. 14. We cannot⁴ live without eating. 15. Writing is useful, and speaking is not always indispensable. 16. In spite of ourselves we are obliged to work a-great-deal. 17. Upon my saying good-by, the girls raised their heads (sing.). 18. Our hands are cold and our feet are wet. 19. We know that the ten tribes of Israel were conquered by the king of Assyria, and some believe that-they-can⁴ (infin.) find the origin of the Indian race in these conquered men. But the points of resemblance that some historians allege are not sufficient to prove our theory. History only says that the conquerors carried (pret.) the tribes into captivity; and that later-on⁵ the remnants of the ancient Israelites left the country of the Gentiles to⁶ go to a distant country. Apart from their religious customs and ceremonies, there appears to be⁷ no proof that these unfortunate Israelites were⁸ the progenitors of the American Indians. But Esdras has written a history which says that the Israelites, advancing as far as Media and carrying out a certain design of theirs, passed-over to a land where the Gentiles were not dwelling. He knows nothing more of their plans nor of their journeys. We think that they established (pret.) themselves in America.

LESSON XXV

124. Possessive Pronouns.

SINGULAR

1st Pers. el mío (la mía, los míos, las mías), mine.

2d Pers. el tuyo (la tuya, los tuyos, las tuyas), yours, thine.

3d Pers. el suyo (la suya, los suyos, las suyas), his, hers, its, or yours.

PLURAL

- 1st Pers. el nuestro (la nuestra, los nuestros, las nuestras), ours.
 2d Pers. el vuestro (la vuestra, los vuestros, las vuestras), yours.
 3d Pers. el suyo (la suya, los suyos, las suyas), theirs or yours.

Note that the Spanish possessive pronouns usually require the definite article, while the English do not.

a. Possessive pronouns, like possessive adjectives, agree in gender and number with the things possessed.

mi casa es más grande que la tuya, pero prefiero la tuya á la mía, my house is larger than yours, but I prefer yours to mine.

b. Los míos often means 'my people'; los tuyos, 'your people,' etc.

Lo mío means 'mine,' 'what is mine'; lo tuyo, 'yours,' 'what is yours,' etc.

125. Suyo and su have several meanings; hence, in order to avoid ambiguity, it is often necessary to use de and the proper personal pronoun instead of suyo and su.

(1) Instead of tengo su libro one would then say :

tengo el libro de él, I have his book.¹

tengo el libro de ella, I have her book.

tengo el libro de usted, I have your book.

tengo el libro de ellos, I have their (masc.) book.

tengo el libro de ellas, I have their (fem.) book.

tengo el libro de ustedes, I have your (plur.) book.

(2) And instead of tengo el suyo one would say :

tengo el de él, I have his.

tengo el de ella, I have hers.

tengo el de usted, I have yours.

tengo el de ellos, I have theirs (masc.).

tengo el de ellas, I have theirs (fem.).

tengo el de ustedes, I have yours (plur.).

¹ One may also say tengo su libro de él (ella, ellos, ellas, usted, ustedes).

- a.* The same construction is used with the possessive case of nouns.
tengo el libro de Miguel, I have Michael's book.
tengo el de Miguel, I have Michael's.
- b.* The definite article is usually omitted before a possessive pronoun (or noun) in predicate.
esta pluma es mía, this pen is mine.
esa pluma es de usted, that pen is yours.
aquella pluma es de Miguel, that pen (over there) is Michael's.

But the article is used to make an emphatic distinction.

esta pluma es la mía (la de usted, la de Miguel), this pen (not the other) is the one that belongs to me (to you, to Michael).

Let our fellow-citizens know⁸ us, and they will say⁹ that we love our country. 17. These flowers are ours and not his; they smell good.¹⁰

⁵ Put the adverb immediately after the verb.

⁶ dicen.

⁷ Use sacar.

⁸ conozcan.

⁹ dirán.

¹⁰ bien.

LESSON XXVI

128. Demonstrative Adjectives.

este (-a, -os, -as), this.

ese (-a, -os, -as), that.

aquel (aquella, -os, -as), that.

a. A demonstrative adjective regularly precedes its noun: esta mujer, 'this woman.'

129. Este denotes what is near the speaker; ese, what is near the person addressed; and aquel, what is remote from both. In reference to time, este denotes present time; ese, a near period; and aquel, remote time.

esta pluma que yo tengo , this pen which I have.	aquella pluma que él tiene , that pen which he has.
esa pluma que tú tienes , that pen which you have.	esta semana , this week.
	ese mes , that month.
	aquel año , that (remote) year.

130. Demonstrative Pronouns.

éste (-a, -os, -as), this (one).	esto , this.
ése (-a, -os, -as), that (one).	eso , that.
aqué! (aquélla, -os, -as) , that (one).	aquello , that.

The masculine and feminine forms take the accent; the neuter (esto, eso, aquello) do not. The neuter pronouns do not represent a noun, but a whole phrase, sentence, or idea (compare with ello).

aquella casa es más alta que ésta, that house is taller than this one.
no me gustan estas manzanas; prefiero aquéllas, I do not like those apples; I prefer those (over there).

ésos son míos, those (near you) are mine.

¿crees esto? do you believe this (which I have just told)?

no comprendo eso, I do not understand that (which you have just told me).

aquello parece imposible, that (affair of which we are told) seems impossible.

a. Éste sometimes means 'the latter,' and aqué! 'the former.'

b. The English pronoun 'that' (not denoting a specific object) is esto, when it denotes what has to do with the speaker: ¿crees esto? 'do you believe that (which I have just told you)?' An unemphatic 'that' is often not to be expressed in Spanish: será magnífico, 'that will be fine.'

c. In correspondence, en (de, á) ésta means 'in (from, to) the writer's town,' and en (de, á) ésa means 'in (from, to) the correspondent's town,' ciudad, 'town,' or plaza,¹ 'market,' being understood: salí ayer de ésa y llegué hoy á ésta, 'I left your town yesterday, and arrived here to-day.'

131. Before a relative clause, and before a phrase introduced by de, the definite article is generally used instead of a demonstrative or personal pronoun.²

el que desea mucho siempre es pobre, he who desires much, is always poor.

esta muchacha es la que usted buscaba, this girl is the one (that) you were looking for.

aquellos caballos son los que vimos ayer, those horses are the ones (that) we saw yesterday.

lo que dice es verdad, what (or that which) he says, is true.

el de la barba, the one with the beard.

la pluma de acero y la de oro, the steel pen and the gold one (lit., 'the pen of steel and that of gold').

el perro de usted y el de su amigo, your dog and that of your friend (your dog and your friend's).

lo de ayer, the affair of yesterday.

a. The demonstrative adjective aquel may replace the article. This occurs often when the following relative is the object of a preposition.

aquella á quien he escrito la carta, the one to whom I have written the letter.

aquel de la capa verde, that one with the green cloak.

aquello de ayer, that affair of yesterday.

¹ In Mexico, plaza often means 'village,' or 'small town.'

² When thus used, el is sometimes called a pronoun, but it seems best to call it an adjective (the article) when it limits the application of an adjective, a phrase, or a clause, used substantively: as in el blanco, 'the white one'; el de la capa verde, 'the one with the green cloak'; el que vino ayer, 'the one that came yesterday.' Note the same use of the adjective aquel, given below in a.

Those who do not obey the human laws, do not observe the divine laws either, and they lose the respect of all their compatriots.

¹ Omit. ² Filipinas. ³ eso. ⁴ de. ⁵ Say: "that I return," using pres. subj. ⁶ siempre. ⁷ Use tronar in the pres. indic.

LESSON XXVII

133. Relative Pronouns.

que, who, which, that.

el cual and el que, who, which.

quien, who.

cuanto, all that.

- a.* A relative pronoun agrees in gender and number with its antecedent.
b. A relative pronoun is sometimes omitted in English, but never in Spanish: 'the man I saw' = 'the man that (whom) I saw,' el hombre que ví.
c. An English relative clause sometimes ends with a preposition; in Spanish the preposition must precede the pronoun it governs: 'the house that we live in' = 'the house in which we live,' la casa en que vivimos.

134. Que, 'who, which, that,' is invariable, and as subject or object of a verb it may refer to persons or things; it is the most common of the Spanish relative pronouns.

la muchacha que cose, the girl that is sewing.	la facilidad con que escribe, the ease with which he writes.
el indio que ¹ mataron, the Indian whom they killed.	la viuda, que amaba tiernamente á su marido, le olvidó en breve, 'the widow who dearly loved her husband soon forgot him.'
los libros que están sobre la mesa, the books that are on the table.

a. After a preposition, que refers to things, and quien (quienes) to persons.

la casa en que vivo, the house in which I live.	el hombre á quien escribí, the man to whom I wrote.
--	--

- 135. el cual (la cual, los cuales, las cuales, lo cual), el que (la que, los que, las que, lo que), who, which.

The masculine and feminine forms refer to persons or things ; the neuter forms refer only to a whole phrase, sentence, or idea.

Instead of que, either el cual (la cual, etc.) or el que (la que, etc.) is regularly used in cases of ambiguity, emphasis, or the separation of antecedent and relative.

he escrito á la hija del señor Martínez, la cual está enferma, 'I have written to Mr. Martinez' daughter, who is ill.'

hallé en el bolsillo cincuenta pesos en moneda de oro y plata, los cuales (los que) dí á mi padre, I found in the purse fifty dollars in gold and silver coin, which I gave to my father.

el profesor me escribe que te comportas bien, lo cual (lo que) me agrada muchísimo, your master (teacher) writes me that you behave well, which pleases me greatly.

a. Moreover, el cual or el que is generally used when the relative is governed by por or sin,² or by a preposition of two or more syllables. After a compound preposition, el cual is preferable to el que.

las razones por las cuales (las que) se decidió, the reasons on account of which he decided.

² In referring to persons, quien may be used with por and sin.

la ciudad hacia la cual (la que) marchaba el ejército, the city toward which the army was marching.

el edificio en frente del cual me estaba esperando mi amigo, the building in front of which my friend was awaiting me.

b. Lo cual or lo que is regularly used as the neuter relative; que is rarely neuter: le presté todos mis libros, lo cual (lo que) le dió mucho placer, 'I lent him all my books, which pleased him greatly.' For the use of lo que, meaning 'that which, what,' see Demonstrative Pronouns, § 131.

c. There is usually little choice between el cual and el que, except that el cual is used the oftener in literary language.

REMARK. — It should be noted that el que has two meanings, 'who' (as explained above) or 'he who' (as explained in § 131). In the first case, the article modifies only the relative pronoun; in the second case it modifies the entire relative clause.

136. Radical-changing Verbs. — Second and Third Classes. Study §§ 229–234.

Exercise XXVII

A. 1. Prefiero que muramos á que no sacudamos el yugo del extranjero. 2. El hombre que no se arrepiente de sus pecados no se convierte jamás en buen cristiano. 3. Sonriéndose, el soldado, sin la ayuda del cual yo no hubiera escapado del peligro, partió para la ciudad. 4. Yo no hubiera creído que consintieran sus hermanas de Vd. en la proposición de quedarse aquí, la cual les hizo¹ su tío. 5. En el presente de indicativo y de subjuntivo, así como en el singular del imperativo, erguir pertenece á dos conjugaciones: podemos decir yergo, yerga, yergue ó irgo, irga, irgue. 6. Sentiría muchísimo que Vd. no durmiese bien esta noche. 7. Yo no concibo que Vd. pida tanto dinero por una cosa que no cuesta mucho. 8. De esta fuente el agua sale hirviendo. 9. Let us take leave of the wounded-man; he slept well yesterday and he is not moaning tonight. 8. The soldier repented and became-converted into a³ good Christian. 9. Yergue and irgue belong to the imperative of erguir, which in the singular of the subjunctive has irga and yerga. 10. Charles's elder sister, who is under the tree, dresses well. 11. Let us follow the soldier to the city toward which the army is marching. 12. The man did not consent to the proposition which the count made him; he preferred to die. 13. Never lie, and always repent of your sins.

14. This is a Spanish proverb: "Although the monkey dressed in silk, she remained a³ monkey." 15. The prize which we are giving to the boy does not cost much. 16. We started for the city, which obliged them to follow us. 17. The soldiers who found the books gave them to the men to whom they belonged. 18. We threw away the oranges which were not ripe; the lads regretted it, although it did not surprise them. 19. If I asked-for (imperf. subj.) money, without which I should not be able to start for the city, you would laugh. 20. This is the fountain under which the boy found the book and the coins.

² que.

³ Omit.

LESSON XXVIII

137. Quien (quienes), 'who,' in modern Spanish refers only to persons or personified things.

(1) After a preposition,¹ quien is used instead of que, in referring to persons; as in el amigo de quien hablamos 'the friend of whom we are speaking.'

(2) When the subject or the direct object of a verb, quien either introduces a clause which is not restrictive of the antecedent, or it includes its antecedent.

ví á tu señor padre, quien me lo contó todo, I saw your father, who told me all.

me lo contó todo tu señor padre, á quien ví poco ha, your father, whom I saw a short while ago, told me all.

quien te adula te agravia, he who flatters you, insults you.

no tengo á quien dirigirme, I have not any one to whom to apply.

Cf. ví al hombre que te lo contó todo, 'I saw the man who' (restrictive) 'told you all.'

a. Quien sometimes serves to indicate the number of its antecedent, or the fact that the antecedent is a person.

me topé con el abuelo de estos niños, quien los buscaba en todas partes, I ran across the grandfather of these children, who was looking for them everywhere.

ayer ví al dueño de la casa, quien está en esta ciudad, yesterday I saw the owner of the house, who is in this city.

b. Quien is equivalent to either one of the two el que's (see §§ 131 and 135).

quien (el que) calla otorga, he who is silent gives consent.

llamé á un mozo, á quien (al que) entregué la carta, I called a waiter, to whom I gave the letter.

But in colloquial language, quien is rarely used as the subject or the direct object of a verb, save in a few proverbial expressions; in its stead el cual or el que is used.

c. Correlative quien . . . quien means 'one . . . another': quien lloraba, quien gemía, 'one was weeping, another was groaning,' or 'some were weeping and some were groaning.'

138. Cuanto (-a, -os, -as), 'how much,' 'how many,' 'all that,' is used as pronoun or adjective.

le ofrecí cuanto dinero tenía, 'I offered him all the money that I had.'
cuantos entraron en el buque, perecieron, all that entered the ship perished.

139. Cuyo (-a, -os, -as), 'whose,' 'of whom,' 'of which,' is a relative possessive adjective. It agrees in gender and number with the thing possessed, and it may refer to persons or things.

la señora cuyas amigas han llegado, the lady whose friends have arrived.

un lugar de cuyo nombre no me acuerdo, a place the name of which I do not remember.

140. The adverb donde, 'where,' is often used as equivalent to a preposition plus a relative, and sometimes with the preposition expressed, as in la casa donde (en donde) vivo, 'the house in which I live.'

141. Verbs with Inceptive Endings and -uir Verbs. — Study §§ 220 and 235.

Provided a man is born free, it does not matter that he has faults. 10. There is a Spanish proverb: "Out of the frying pan into the fire." 11. (By) distributing the public burdens, the senators will show that all relating to the needs of the citizens interests them. 12. He who is⁵ fond of brilliant speeches often judges by appearances. 13. With their teacher the pupils have visited a house in which fine watches are made. 14. The author whose book I have just received argues in favor of tariff reform, but he does not influence the feelings of the citizens, because his book is wholly without interest. 15. He who argued with his master never served him well. 16. I should be sorry that you should argue with the poet in-order-to⁶ show off your attainments. 17. Mr. Cisneros is the gentleman whom I thank for that favor. 18. Ask the bookseller for a book which shall instruct (pres. subj.) us and shall not sadden us. 19. The maid has given me the visiting card of Mr. Suárez; he is the man whom watch-making and all related to that art interests very much.

20. I ascribe the behavior of the citizens to the taxes which the tyrant will not diminish. 21. It is no new thing to calumniate a man and to ascribe faults to him who hasn't any.⁷

LESSON XXIX

142. Interrogative Pronouns.

qué, what.

cuál, which.

quién, who.

cuánto (-a), how much.

The interrogatives take the accent in both direct and indirect questions.

143. Qué, 'what,' may be used as pronoun or adjective. As a pronoun, it refers to things, and is neuter.

¿qué es eso? what is that?

¿qué dijo? what did he say?

¿qué hora es? what time is it?

¿qué hombre es éste? what man is this?

pregunta qué pasajeros han llegado, he asks what passengers have arrived.

a. In exclamations, qué is 'what (a)' before an attributive, and 'how' before a predicate adjective: ¡qué linda luna! 'what a pretty moon!' ¡qué pálido estás! 'how pale you are!' To add emphasis, tan, 'so,' or más, 'more,' may be placed before the attributive adjective, which then follows its noun: ¡qué día tan hermoso (más hermoso)! 'what a beautiful day!'

144. Quién (quiénes), 'who,' is used only as a pronoun, and refers only to persons. Interrogative 'whose' is usually de quién.

¿quién llama? who is knocking?

pregunta quiénes eran las señoras, he asks who the ladies were.

¿de quién es aquella hermosa casa? whose is that beautiful house?

¿de quién es este caballo? whose horse is this? (lit., 'of whom is this horse?').

145. Cuál (cuáles), 'which,' is chiefly used as a pronoun; it may refer to persons or things.

¿cuál de las plumas quiere usted?	¿á cuáles de mis amigos ha visto which pen (lit., 'which of the	usted hoy? which of my friends pens') do you wish?	have you seen to-day?

a. Cuál may be used adjectively, as in ¿cuál casa prefieres? 'which house do you prefer?' but ¿cuál de las casas prefieres? is the more common construction.

b. When 'what' stands in the predicate, it is usually to be expressed by cuál: ¿cuál es la fecha de la carta? 'what is the date of the letter?' ¿cuál es la ciudad capital de los Estados Unidos? 'what is the capital city of the United States?' Qué is used if a definition is wanted: ¿qué es la filosofía griega? 'what is Greek philosophy?'

146. The interrogative possessive cúyo, 'whose,' is little used; it refers only to persons, and is, as a rule, used only in the predicate. Interrogative 'whose' is generally de quién.

¿cúya (better, de quién) es esta	¿cúyo (better, de quién) es aquel casa? whose house is this?	caballo? whose horse is that?

REMARK.—One does not say: ¿cúya casa habita usted? 'whose house do you occupy?' but ¿cúya (de quién) es la casa que usted habita?

147. Cuánto (-a) is 'how much'; cuántos (-as), 'how many.' Cuánto (-a, -os, -as) may be used as adjective or pronoun.

¿cuántos hay? how many are there?

¿cuánto dinero necesita usted? how much money do you need?

¿cuántas vacas vendiste? how many cows did you sell?

148. Irregular Verbs: Ir, '(to) go,' and Venir, '(to) come.' Study §§ 247 and 248.

a. 'Go and' (followed by a verb) is ir á; 'come and' is venir á.

vaya usted á decírselo, go and tell him. venga á verlo, come and see it.

149. Idiomatic Expressions.

va á llover, it is going to rain.

vamos á ver, let us see.

¹ Abbreviation of usted: cf. § 90.

² Pret. Indic. of hacer.

³ De.

⁴ Say: 'is the palace of the Duke.' ⁵ Radical-changing verb, 1st class: volvere.

LESSON XXX

150. Indefinite Adjective Pronouns.

Alguien, 'some one,' 'somebody,' 'any one,' 'anybody,' algo, 'something,' 'anything,' are pronouns and invariable. Alguien refers only to persons; algo is neuter.

alguien toca á la puerta, some one is knocking at the door.

¿hallaste algo? did you find something (anything)?

a. 'Not — any one,' 'not — anybody,' is no — nadie; 'not — anything' is no — nada. See "Negation," § 165. Alguien and algo are never combined with negatives.

151. Alguno (-a, -os, -as), 'some,' 'any,' 'a few,' is used as adjective or pronoun.

algunos de los amigos de usted, some of your friends.

tiene algunos libros muy raros, he has a few very rare books.

a. 'Not — any' is usually no — ninguno or no — alguno (after noun).

b. In partitive expressions, unemphatic 'some' and 'any,' used as adjectives, are generally not to be expressed in Spanish.

tengo pan, pero no tengo mante-	quiero comprar manzanas y naquilla , I have some bread, but	ranjas , I wish to buy some ap-
I haven't any butter.	ples and oranges.

In answer to a question, 'some' or 'any' is then expressed by a personal pronoun object, or the noun is repeated.

¿no tiene Vd. peras? haven't you any pears? hoy no las tengo, I haven't any to-day.

¿tiene Vd. vino? have you any wine? no tengo vino (or vino no tengo), I haven't any.

¿hay uvas? are there any grapes? sí, las hay, yes, there are some.

¿hay pan? is there any bread? no lo hay (or no hay pan), there isn't any.

152. Unos (-as) means 'some':

tengo unos quinientos pesos, I have some five hundred dollars.

Unos sometimes seems to mean little more than 'a pair of.'

el elefante tiene unas orejas enormes, the elephant has 'a pair of' enormous ears.

153. Nadie, 'no one,' 'nobody,' 'not any one,' 'not anybody,' nada, 'nothing,' 'not anything,' are pronouns and invariable. Nadie refers only to persons; nada is neuter. See "Negation," § 165.

nadie ha venido hoy, no one has come to-day.
nada veo, I do not see anything.

154. Ninguno (-a, -os, -as), 'none,' 'no,' 'not any,' is used as adjective or pronoun.

ninguna casa, no (not any) house.
ninguno de los niños, none of the children.

a. English 'no,' 'not any,' is often expressed by no, 'not,' before the verb.

no tengo tiempo, I have no (not any) time.
no tiene enemigos, he has no (not any) enemies.

155. Mucho (-a), 'much,' muchos (-as), 'many,' is used as adjective or pronoun.

mucho tiempo, much (a great deal of) time.
muchos años, many years.
muchos han partido, many have left.

a. 'Very much' is muchísimo (rather than muy mucho).

156. Poco (-a), 'little' (meaning 'a small quantity'), pocos (-as), 'few,' is used as adjective or pronoun.

tengo poco dinero, I have little money.
pocos han venido, few have come.

a. Un poco de is 'a little': tengo un poco de vino, 'I have a little wine'; cf. tengo poco vino y mucha leche, 'I have a little (i.e. only a little) wine and much milk.'

157. Todo (-a, -os, -as), 'all,' 'every,' is used as adjective or pronoun.

todo aquel día, all that day.	todos los hombres, all the men. ¹
toda mujer, every woman.	todas las noches, every night.
todo el mundo, everybody.	todos lo dicen, all say so.

a. 'All,' meaning 'the whole,' is todo (-a, -os, -as) el (la, los, las) : toda la semana, 'all week.'

b. The neuter pronoun todo means 'all,' 'everything': todo es vanidad en este mundo, 'all is vanity in this world.'

158. Mismo (-a, -os, -as), 'same,' 'very,' 'self,' 'himself' ('herself,' etc.), is used as an adjective.

el mismo día, the same day.

el exceso mismo de mi felicidad me matará, the very excess of my happiness will kill me.

él mismo me lo dijo, he told me so himself.

creo que es usted la misma virtud, I believe that you are virtue itself.

In the sense of 'self,' it often follows the noun or pronoun.

a. El mismo (la misma, los mismos, las mismas, lo mismo), 'the same,' is used as pronoun.

159. Ambos (-as), los dos (las dos), 'both (of),' are used as adjectives or pronouns.

tengo las dos (ambas) manos heladas, both of my hands are frozen.

nos ama á los dos, he loves us both.

160. Cada, 'each,' is used as adjective, and cada uno (-a) or cada cual, 'each (one),' as pronoun (cada is invariable).

cada vez, each time.

dí un peso á cada uno (cada cual), I gave each one a dollar.

161. Otro (-a, -os, -as), 'other,' 'another,' is used as adjective or pronoun ; it does not admit the indefinite article.

¹ Todos los hombres is 'all men' (generally speaking) if the noun denotes all of its kind.

el otro día, the other day. otra semana, another week.
 quiero otro caballo, I wish an- no tengo otros, I have no others other horse. (I haven't any others).

Note the position of otro in otros muchos, 'many others,' otros tres, 'three others,' etc.

162. Uno (-a) y otro (-a), 'both' (in the sense of 'each'), uno (-a) ú otro (-a), 'either (one),' ni uno (-a) ni otro (-a), 'neither (one),' 'not either (one),' el uno — el otro (la una — la otra), 'each other,' los unos — los otros (las unas — las otras), 'one another,' are used as adjectives or pronouns.

personas de uno y otro sexo, persons of both sexes.

aceptaré uno ú otro, I will accept either (one).

no quiero ni uno ni otro, I wish neither (one), or I do not wish either (one).

se burlan el uno del otro, they make sport of each other.

163. Tal (tales), 'such,' 'such a,' is used as adjective or pronoun; it is never followed by the indefinite article.

tales hombres, such men.

tal muchacho, such a boy.

a. Un tal is 'one,' 'a certain'; el tal is 'the said': me lo contó un tal Manzanares, 'one (a certain) Manzanares told me'; el tal Gómez era un pícaro, 'the said Gomez was a rascal.'

164. Cosa, 'thing,' is used in the formation of many compound indefinite pronouns, which occur frequently in colloquial language.

alguna cosa, something, anything.

ninguna cosa or cosa alguna, nothing, not anything.

la misma cosa, the same thing.

otra cosa, something else, anything else.

tal cosa, such a thing, etc.¹

¹ Also in interrogative qué cosa, 'what thing.'

165. Negation. — The pronouns nadie, ‘no one,’ nada, ‘nothing,’ ninguno, ‘none,’ and the adverbs ni — ni, ‘neither — nor,’ nunca and jamás, ‘never,’¹ and tampoco, ‘not either,’ require the verb to be made negative when they follow the verb. They are negative in themselves if they precede the verb or if no verb is expressed,² no temo nada or nada temo, I fear nothing (I do not fear anything).

no tengo ni pluma ni papel or ni pluma ni papel tengo, I have neither pen nor paper (I haven’t either pen or paper).

no le ví nunca or nunca le ví, I never saw him.

nadie se acordaba de él, ni él se acordaba de nadie, no one remembered him, nor did he remember any one.

su hijo no es, ni será nunca nadie, her son is not nor ever will be anything.

no quiero aquel caballo tampoco or tampoco quiero aquel caballo, I do not wish that horse either.

¿Quien viéne? — Nadie. Who is coming? — No one.

¿Qué dice Vd.? — Nada. What are you saying? — Nothing.

a. As a rule, negative pronouns and adverbs are used instead of positive ones if the sentence is in any way negative, or expects a negative answer, or if the pronoun or adverb follows a comparative.

es inútil decir nada, it is useless to say anything.

sin olvidarte nunca, without ever forgetting you.

¿hay nada más sublime? is there anything more sublime?

el viejo parece más feliz que nunca, the old man seems happier than ever.

b. In a negative sentence, alguno may be used instead of ninguno, in which case alguno follows its noun: no tiene enemigo alguno, ‘he has no enemy.’

¹ ‘Never’ is commonly expressed by nunca. Jamás after a positive verb is positive: ¿ha visitado Vd. jamás a Méjico? ‘have you ever visited Mexico?’

² In colloquial language, the negative (except no) usually follows the verb, e.g. no tengo nada is more common than nada tengo, ‘I have nothing,’ or ‘I haven’t anything.’

166. Irregular Verbs.

Querer, '(to) wish,' and poder, '(to) be able (can).'

Study §§ 242 and 243.

setenta,	70.	un millón,	1,000,000.
ochenta,	80.	dos millones,	2,000,000.
noventa,	90.

a. The cardinals are invariable, except uno (-a), -cientos (-as) in the combinations from doscientos (-as) to novecientos (-as) inclusive, and quinientos (-as): doscientos hombres, 'two hundred men'; doscientas mujeres, 'two hundred women'; doscientas mil personas, 'two hundred thousand persons.'

b. In compound numerals, uno (-a) drops the final vowel before a masculine or a feminine noun: treinta y un soldados, 'thirty-one soldiers'; cincuenta y un casas, 'fifty-one houses.'

c. Millón takes un, but ciento and mil do not: cien estudiantes, 'one hundred students'; mil pesos, 'one thousand dollars'; un millón de pesetas, 'one million pesetas.'

But ciento un, doscientos un, etc., may occur before mil: ciento un mil trescientos veinte y cinco, 101,325.

d. The conjunction y is used to connect the last of a series of numerals with the foregoing numeral: mil doscientos ochenta y cinco, 1285.

e. Counting by hundreds is not carried above nine hundred in Spanish; beginning with ten hundred mil is used: mil ochocientos noventa y tres, 1893.

f. As substantives, ciento or centenar, mil or millar, are used; but only ciento and millar are regularly used to express rate: centenares de caballos, 'hundreds of horses'; dos pesetas el ciento, 'two pesetas per hundred'; miles de aves, 'thousands of birds'; á peso el millar, 'at one dollar per thousand.'¹

169. Ordinal Numerals.

primero, -a (primo, -a),	1st.	trigésimo, -a,	30th.

décimo nono, -a,	19th.	milésimo, -a,	1,000th.
vigésimo, -a,	20th.	dosmilésimo, -a,	2,000th.
vigésimo primo, -a,	21st.	diezmilésimo, -a,	10,000th.
vigésimo segundo, -a,	22d.	millonésimo, -a,	1,000,000th. ³
vigésimo tercio, -a,	23d.

¹ In mercantile language uno is usually omitted, as here, before the name of the coin.

² These are also written décimotercio, décimocuarto, etc.

³ The use of the ordinals in Spanish is daily becoming less. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that only trained persons know them from 'twentieth' on. .

a. The shorter forms, primo, tercio, and nono are used in compound ordinal numerals. Sexto and séptimo are usually pronounced and often written sesto and sétimo. For the apocopation of primero and tercero see § 66.

b. The ordinals agree in gender and number with the noun they modify. A single ordinal may precede or follow its noun; a compound ordinal regularly follows: el primer día, 'the first day'; el siglo décimo sexto (or el siglo diez y seis), 'the sixteenth century.'

c. After primero, the cardinals are generally used in Spanish instead of the ordinals, to specify the number of a volume, book, chapter, lesson, century, etc.: el tomo veinte, 'the twentieth volume' (or 'volume twenty'); el siglo diez y nueve, 'the nineteenth century.'

d. The ordinals are used up to décimo (or undécimo) to indicate the order of succession of sovereigns; but from that number on the cardinals are regularly used: Carlos quinto, 'Charles the Fifth';¹ Léon trece, 'Leo XIII.'

e. In dates, the cardinals are used instead of the ordinals, with the exception of primero: el primero (el dos, el tres, etc.) de junio, 'the first (the second, the third, etc.) of June.'

170. Fractional Numerals.

un medio,	$\frac{1}{2}$.	un undécimo, onzavo, or once-avo,	$\frac{1}{11}$.
un tercio,	$\frac{1}{3}$.	un dozavo or doce-avo,	$\frac{1}{12}$.
dos tercios,	$\frac{2}{3}$.	un trezavo or trece-avo;	$\frac{1}{13}$.
un cuarto,	$\frac{1}{4}$.	un catorzavo or catorce-avo,	$\frac{1}{14}$.
tres cuartos,	$\frac{3}{4}$.	un quinzavo or quince-avo,	$\frac{1}{15}$.
un quinto,	$\frac{1}{5}$.	un diez y seisavo (seis-avo),	$\frac{1}{16}$.
un sexto,	$\frac{1}{6}$.	un diez y sietavo (siete-avo),	$\frac{1}{17}$.
un séptimo,	$\frac{1}{7}$.	un veintavo or veinte-avo,	$\frac{1}{20}$.
un octavo,	$\frac{1}{8}$.	un treintavo,	$\frac{1}{30}$.
un noveno,	$\frac{1}{9}$.	un centésimo or centavo,	$\frac{1}{100}$.
un décimo,	$\frac{1}{10}$.	un milésimo,	$\frac{1}{1000}$.
		un millonésimo,	$\frac{1}{1000000}$.

a. Fractional numerals may also be expressed by the ordinals with parte, especially when a partitive expression follows or is understood: la tercera parte de ellos, 'one-third of them.'

b. 'Half' ('a half,' 'one-half,' 'half a '), as a substantive, is expressed by la mitad; as an adjective, by medio (-a). In calculations, medio (-a) is used.

la mitad de mis bienes, 'one half of my goods.'

medio día, 'half a day.'

una hora y media, 'an hour and a half.'

171. Collective Numerals.

un par, a pair.

una decena, ten.

una docena, a dozen.

una quincena, fifteen.

una veintena, twenty, a score.

una sesentena, sixty.

una centena or un centenar, one hundred.

un millar, one thousand.

a. The ending -ena may make the numeral indefinite: e.g. una veintena, some twenty, about twenty.

172. Multiplicative Numerals.

simple, single.

doble or duplicado, double.¹

triple or triplicado, treble.

ya acabé, I have already finished.

ya entiendo, I understand now.

ya no fuma, he doesn't smoke any longer (any more).

ya no tengo dinero, I have no more money (I haven't any more money).

179. -mente.—In English many adverbs of manner are formed by adding the termination -ly to adjectives, as 'quickly' (from 'quick'), 'correctly' (from 'correct'), etc. In Spanish many adverbs are similarly formed by adding -mente to the feminine singular of descriptive adjectives, as severamente (from severo), 'severely,' fácilmente (from fácil), 'easily,' etc.

a. When several adverbs in -mente modify the same word, -mente is omitted from all but the last: habla docta, concisa y elegantemente, 'he speaks learnedly, concisely, and elegantly.'

180. The Prepositions Por and Para.—'For' is expressed by por or para. If 'for' means 'for the sake of,' 'on account of,' or 'in exchange for,' it is expressed by por; if it denotes purpose or destination, it is expressed by para.

daría la vida por él, I would give my life for him.

los sacrificios que hizo por ella, the sacrifices that he made for her.

peleaba por la vida, he was fighting for his life.

le castigué por haberme dicho una mentira, I punished him for having told me a lie.

he pagado diez pesos por el perro, I have paid ten dollars for the dog.

este libro es para ti, this book is for you.

parto para Madrid, I am leaving for Madrid.

a. Por also means 'through,' 'by,'¹ 'per.'

¹ 'By' is usually de, after passive verbs and participles that express feeling or emotion: es amado de todos, 'he is beloved by all.'

por temor, through fear.

entró por la ventana, he entered through the window.

este árbol ha sido plantado por mi abuelo, this tree was planted by my grandfather.

me cogió por la mano, he caught me by the hand.

diez por ciento, ten per cent.

mil pesos por año, a thousand dollars per year (a year).

b. Before an infinitive, 'to,' meaning 'for the sake of,' 'in exchange for,' is por, and meaning 'in order to' is para.

pugnando por entrar, fighting to enter.

lo hizo para engañarme, he did it to deceive me.

c. Note also the following ways of expressing 'for' in Spanish:

estuve allí un año, I was there for a year.

hace un año que estoy aquí, I have been here for a year.

voy á Madrid por un año, I am going to Madrid for a year.

tengo que escribir un ejercicio en castellano para mañana, I must write a Spanish exercise for to-morrow.

181. In English nouns are often used adjectively, as in 'a wheel chair,' 'a saw-mill,' etc. A noun used adjectively in English is usually expressed in Spanish by a noun preceded by de or para.

una vela de cera, a wax candle.

una máquina de coser, a sewing-machine.

un vaso para vino, a wineglass.

una cuchara para sopa, a soup spoon.

182. With verbs meaning to take (from), to ask (of), etc., 'of' or 'from' is expressed in Spanish by á.

el capitán quitó al soldado el puñal, the captain took the dagger from the soldier.

hemos pedido un favor á tu señor padre, we asked a favor of your father.

¿ á quién compraste el caballo? of whom did you buy the horse?

a. A personal pronoun object is put in the dative case (indirect object).

me han robado mucho dinero, they have stolen a great deal of money from me.

se lo quité, I took it away from him.

183. A preposition is usually retained before a substantive clause in Spanish, but omitted in English.

estoy convencido de mi error, I am convinced of my error.

estoy convencido de que no dijo la verdad, I am convinced that he did not tell the truth.

me alegro de eso, I am glad of that.

me alegro de que no pueda venir, I am glad that he cannot come.

185. Irregular Verbs.

Dar, (to) give.

Oír, (to) hear.

Saber, (to) know.

Ver, (to) see.

Study §§ 241, 245, 254, and 258.

186. Saber. '(To) know,' meaning '(to) have knowledge of,' '(to) be aware of,' is saber (saber does not take a personal object); meaning '(to) be acquainted with,' it is conocer.

¿sabes que es verdad? do you know that it is true?

¿conoces á aquel joven? do you know that young man?

a. Saber also means '(to) know how,'¹ '(to) learn' (in the sense of '(to) get knowledge of'); saber á means '(to) taste of,' '(to) savor of.'

no sabe nadar, he doesn't know how to swim.

supe que no pudiste venir, I learned that you couldn't come.

sabe á pescado, it tastes of fish.

b. Can, meaning 'know how,' is saber: 'can he read and write?'
¿sabe leer y escribir?

¹ 'To know how' is saber como, when the main and the dependent verbs have different subjects, as in no sé como viven, 'I do not know how they live.' And also when the dependent clause is an indirect question, as in no sé cómo puedo hacerlo, 'I do not know how I can do it.'

LESSON XXXIII

Conjunctions.

188. y, é (before initial i or hi), 'and.'

padre y madre, father and mother. padre é hijo, father and son.

a. y is used before y and the diphthong (h)ie.

tú y yo, you and I.

corta y hiere, it cuts and wounds.

189. ó, ú (before initial o or ho), 'or.'

cinco ó seis, five or six.

siete ú ocho, seven or eight.

a. ú may also be used between two vowels, the first of which is ó, as in leyendo ú escribiendo, 'reading or writing,' but ó is the more usual here.

190. péro, mas, sino (after a negative), 'but.'¹ somos los servidores del rey, pero no sus esclavos, we are the king's servants, but not his slaves.

lo dice, mas no lo creo, he says so, but I do not believe it.

no voy á París sino á Madrid, I am not going to Paris, but to Madrid.

a. 'But,' as adverb or preposition, is often expressed by no . . . sino, and 'no . . . but' by no más que.

no nos visita sino raramente, he visits us but rarely.
no tengo más amigo que tú, I have no friend but you.

191. cuando (interrogatively, cuándo¹), 'when.'

se lo diré cuando venga, I shall tell him when he comes.
¿cuándo lo hará usted? when will you do it?

a. Que is used instead of cuando to introduce a clause that limits the meaning of an adverb or adverb-phrase of time.

en el momento que venga, se lo daré, the moment (that) he comes I shall give it to him. un día que estuve en Barcelona, one day when I was in Barcelona.

192. donde (interrogatively, dónde), 'where,' is often made more specific by prefixing á, en, or de.

¿á dónde va usted? where are you going?
la casa (en) donde vive, the house in which he lives.
¿de dónde viene? where does he come from?

porque, 'because,' porqué, 'why'¹ (also written por qué).

no lo hice porque no quería hacerlo, I did not do it because I did not want to do it.

¿porqué no vino usted ayer? why did you not come yesterday?

193. Agreement of Subject and Verb. — A verb agrees with its subject in number and person.

yo soy, I am; tu eres, you are, etc.

(1) Two or more singular subjects take a verb in the plural: él y ella son, 'he and she are.'

¹ Strictly speaking, the interrogatives cuándo, dónde, and porqué are adverbs rather than conjunctions.

(2) When subjects are of different persons, the verb is in the first person plural if any of the subjects is of the first person; and it is in the second person if the subjects are of the second and third persons.

tu y yo somos, you and I are.

él y yo somos, he and I are.

tu y él sois, you and he are.

194. Word Order.

(1) In an affirmative sentence, the subject may precede or it may follow the verb.

el hombre está enfermo, the man is ill.

ya llegó mi amigo, my friend has already arrived.

(2) In an interrogative sentence, the subject regularly follows the verb.

¿ lo compró Juan ? did John buy it ?

195. When the subject follows the verb :

(1) A noun object usually precedes a noun subject.

¿ compró la casa tu señor padre ? did your father buy the house ?

But if the object is the longer, it follows.

¿ compró tu padre todas estas casas ? did your father buy all these houses ?

(2) A predicate adjective usually precedes a noun subject.

¿ es interesante el libro ? is the book interesting ?

(3) A pronoun subject immediately follows the verb and precedes a noun object or a predicate adjective.

no quiero yo el caballo, I do not want the horse.

¿ está usted enfermo ? are you ill ?

196. If an adverb does not come first in the sentence, it usually follows the verb immediately.

mañana hablaremos el gobernador y yo, tomorrow the governor and I shall have a talk.

aquí se habla inglés, English is spoken here.

LESSON XXXIV

200. Qualifying Suffixes.—The Spanish diminutive and augmentative suffixes consist of endings all of which may be attached to nouns, while most diminutives may be attached to adjectives and adverbs. They occur commonly in colloquial language, but rarely in elevated diction. The foreigner should use them with the utmost caution. It is generally safe to use -ito, but one not to the manner born would best avoid the other suffixes until he has become familiar with their use.

a. The qualifying suffixes are attached to the stem of a word after it has dropped a final unstressed vowel or, often, an unstressed diphthong.

pájaro, pajarillo. amigo, amiguito. rosario, rosarito.

201. Diminutives. — There are three forms of most diminutive suffixes, as follows: (1) -ito, -illo, -uelo, etc.; (2) -cito, -cillo, -zuelo, etc.; and (3) -ecito, -ecillo, -ezuelo, etc.

a. The third form (-ecito,¹ -ecillo, -ezuelo, etc.) is used:

(1) With monosyllables.

flor , flower.	florecita , little flower.	pez , fish.	pececito , little fish.
rey , king.		reyzuelo ,	little king.

(2) With words of more than one syllable, ending in -e.

viaje , journey.	viajecito , little trip.
madre , mother.	madrecita , dear little mother.

(3) With words ending in -a or -o, that have the radical diphthong -ie or -ue.²

viento , wind.	vientecito , slight breeze.
piedra , stone.	piedrecita , little stone.
pueblo , village.	pueblecillo , little village.

(4) With some words ending in unstressed -ia, -io, -ua, -uo.

bestia , beast.	bestiecita , little beast.
genio , genius.	geniecillo , little genius.
lengua , tongue.	lenguecita , little tongue.
arduo , arduous.	arduecito , rather arduous.

¹ Pie makes piececito, piececillo, etc.

² In old Spanish the radical diphthongs ie and ue usually reverted to e and o when a qualifying suffix was added: as in puerta, 'door,' portezuela, 'carriage door'; but in modern Spanish the diphthongs are usually retained: nieto, nietecillo; huevo, huevecillo; etc.

b. The second form (-cito, -cillo, -zuelo, etc.) is used with words of more than one syllable, ending in -n or -r, especially if they have the stress on the final syllable.

ladrón, thief.	ladroncillo, petty thief.
galán, gallant.	galancete, ladies' man.
joven, young man.	jovencito, youth.
autor, author.	autorcillo, young author.
But, árbol, tree.	arbolito, little tree.

c. The first form (-ito, -illo, -uelo, etc.) is used in all other cases.

hermano, brother.	hermanito, little brother.
pollo, fowl.	polluelo, chick.

d. There are some exceptions to the above rules ; such as mano, hand.	manecita (or manita), little hand.

abuelo, grandfather.	abuelito, dear little grandfather.
agrio, sour.	agrillo, rather sour.
jardín, garden.	jardinito (or jardincito), little garden.
señora, lady.	señorita, young lady.

202. The meaning of the various diminutive suffixes is as follows :

a. -ito (-a), -cito (-a), -ecito (-a), express smallness of size, quality, or degree, together with fondness, admiration, and respect. They may usually be translated 'little,' 'dear little,' etc.

pobre hijita mía, my poor dear child.	madrecita, dear little mother.
gatito, kitten.	un poquito, a very little.
toditos los días, almost every day.	cerquita, quite near.
una niña grandecita, a rather large girl.

b. -illo (-a), -cillo (-a), -ecillo (-a), express smallness of size, quality, or degree, with indifference, or with depreciation, ridicule, or pity.

ladroncillo, little thief.	pobre viejecillo, poor old man.
sonrisilla, faint smile.	pobrecillo, poor little fellow.

c. -uelo (-a), -zuelo (-a), -ezuelo (-a), express smallness, together with ridicule, disdain, or mockery.

plazuela, little square. autorcillo, poor author. sus ojuelos, his little eyes.

un perrico, a pretty little dog.

e. -ete (-a), -cete (-a), are used in a diminutive and often depreciative sense.

un pobrete, a poor fellow.

un caballere, a 'dandy.'

f. -ejo (-a) usually denotes contempt.

librejo, worthless book. caminejo, wretched road. amarillejo, yellowish.

g. The dialectal forms -ín (-ina) and -ino (-a) are sometimes used in Castilian to express smallness.

niño chiquitín, wee little child.

cebollino, young onion.

203. Augmentative Suffixes. — a. -ón (-ona) denotes large size, with or without grotesqueness. Feminine nouns usually become masculine upon assuming this ending, unless sex is indicated.

hombión, big man.

barbón, thick beard.

picarón, great rogue.

cucharón, ladle.

b. -azo (-a) has a meaning similar to that of -ón, but it is used less often.

bocaza, big mouth.

mujeraza, large, coarse woman.

c. -ote (-a) is augmentative or depreciative.

palabrota, harsh word.

ricote, rich and pretentious.

d. -acho (-a), -ucho (-a), and -ajo (-a) express disdain and contempt.

vinacho, poor wine. casucha, hut. trapajo, dirty rag.

204. Combinations of diminutive and augmentative endings occur.

chico,¹ chiquito, chiquitín, wee little child.

hombre, hombrón, hombronazo, big, awkward man.

pícaro, picarón, picaroncillo, small man who is a great rogue.

pícaro, picarillo, picarillón, large man who is a little rogue.

205. The endings -azo and -ada are often used to denote a blow, thrust, discharge, etc. These endings are neither diminutive nor augmentative, but denote the result of an action.

bastonazo, blow with a walking-stick.

fusilazo, rifle-shot.

puñalada, stab with a dagger.

206. Idiomatic Expressions.²

THE VERB

207. Like its prototype, the Latin verb, the Spanish verb shows changes of mood, tense, and person, by the addition to a verb stem of certain inflexional endings:

habl-ar, to speak.

habl-aba, I used to speak, or
I was speaking.

habl-o, I speak.

habl-é, I spoke.

habl-ando, speaking.

It resembles the English verb in forming compound tenses by adding to an auxiliary verb the past participle, or the present participle, of a principal verb; e.g.

he hablado, I have spoken; estoy hablando, I am speaking.

208. For the sake of convenience we may consider the Spanish verb under five different headings: (1) the regular verb, (2) the verb with inceptive endings, (3) the radical-changing verb, (4) the -uir (-üir) verb, (5) the irregular verb.

209. There are six principal parts, a knowledge of which will aid in the formation of the other parts of many verbs: these are the present infinitive, the past participle, the present participle (or gerund), the first person singular of the present indicative, the first person singular of the preterite indicative, and the third person singular of the preterite indicative.

(1) The present infinitive is the basis of the future and the conditional of the indicative of all verbs. For the future, there are added to the infinitive of the verb in question the forms, or the ending (as in the case of the second plural), of the present indicative of the verb haber, 'to have.' The initial h of the forms of haber disappears in the composition. For the conditional, there are added to the infinitive of the verb in question the endings of the imperfect indicative of haber. Irregular verbs may show a certain alteration of the infinitive basis.

(2) The past participle enters into the composition of all perfect tenses.

(3) The present participle, or gerund, enters into the composition of the periphrastic progressive tenses.

(4) The first person singular present indicative has, in regular verbs, the same stem as the rest of the verb, except the future and the conditional of the indicative. In irregular, inceptive, and -uir (but not in radical-changing) verbs, it often furnishes the stem for the whole present subjunctive.

(5) The first person singular preterite indicative has the same stem as all the rest of that tense in regular, inceptive, -uir, and irregular verbs; and as the second singular and the first and second plural of this same tense in radical-changing verbs. Its stem is also the same as that of the subjunctive imperfect tenses and the hypothetical (or future) subjunctive of all but radical-changing verbs.

(6) The third person singular preterite indicative has, in radical-changing verbs, the same stem as the third plural of that tense, and as the subjunctive imperfect tenses and the hypothetical subjunctive.

210. The Regular Verb. — It is the custom to speak of three regular conjugations in Spanish, classified, according to their endings, as the -ar, or first; the -er, or second; and the -ir, or third conjugation. In actual practice, however, we find that there are but two entire conjugations, for in all but four forms (the present infinitive, the first and second persons plural of the present indicative, and the second person plural of the imperative) the -ir or third conjugation has the same endings as the -er, or second. In the four exceptional forms, the third conjugation has the distinctive vowel i (-ir, -imos, -ís, -id), whereas the second has e (-er, -emos, -éis, -ed). The following are the paradigms:

211. Compound Perfect Tenses.—The compound tenses of all verbs, regular or not, are formed by adding their past participle (invariable) to a part of the auxiliary haber, 'to have' (see § 237); e.g.

INFINITIVE	PARTICIPLE
Present Perfect to have spoken haber hablado	Present Perfect (Perfect Gerund) having spoken habiendo hablado

Hypothetical (or Future) Perfect

212. Periphrastic Progressive Tenses. — These are formed by adding the present participle to a part of the auxiliary estar, ‘to be’ (or ir, ‘to go,’ venir, ‘to come,’ etc.); e.g.

estoy (voy, etc.) hablando, I am speaking, etc.

See § 121, a.

213. Orthographic Variations. — It is an inviolable rule of Spanish conjugation that the consonantal sound occurring at the end of the infinitive stem (i.e. immediately before the endings -ar, -er, -ir) shall be preserved throughout the verb. When, therefore, there is a change of the vowel beginning the flexional ending, the written character denoting the consonantal sound at the end of the infinitive stem may have to be changed, for the original character may not denote the original sound before the new vowel; thus it is obvious that a first conjugation verb in -car cannot continue to have c before the preterite ending, first person singular in -é; the original k sound of the infinitive stem can now be indicated only by qu before the -é.

Many of the changes here indicated for regular verbs occur also in the case of irregular verbs.

214. The usual variations in spelling are the following :

(1) Verbs in -c-ar change c to qu before flectional e. The change can occur only in the present subjunctive and in the first person singular of the preterite indicative.

Sacar, to take out

Pret. 1st Sing. saqué

Pres. Subj. saque saques saque saquemos saquéis saquen

(2) Verbs in -g-ar insert u between the g and flectional e. The cases of change are the same as for -car verbs.

Pagar, to pay

Pret. 1st Sing. pagué

Pres. Subj. pague, etc.

(The u has no pronounceable value: it is a mere sign that the g is "hard" before the following e.)

(3) Verbs in -gu-ar write a diæresis over the u before flectional e. This is necessary in order to indicate that the u, which has a pronounceable value before the infinitive ending -ar, continues to have one before the -e. Without the diæresis u is silent in the combination gue.

Apaciguar, to pacify

Pret. 1st Sing. apacigiué

Pres. Subj. apacigiüe, etc.

(4) Verbs in -z-ar change z to c before flectional e. The cases concerned are the same as in the three preceding classes, but the variation in spelling is a purely conventional one (due to the fact that modern Spanish does not write z before e or i), and no possible change of sound is involved.

Rezar, to pray

Pret. 1st Sing. recé

Pres. Subj. rece, etc.

215. The preceding cases concern only verbs of the first conjugation. In the ensuing ones we deal with second and third conjugation verbs.

(1) Verbs in -c-er or -c-ir preceded by a consonant change c to z before flexional o or a. The cases concerned here and in the three following classes are the first person singular of the present indicative and all of the present subjunctive.

Vencer, to conquer

Pres. Indic., }
1st Sing. } venzo

Pres. Subj. venza venzas venza venzamos venzáis venzan

Esparcir, to scatter

Pres. Indic., 1st Sing. esparzo Pres. Subj. esparza, etc.

a. For verbs in -cer and -cir preceded by a vowel, see the Inceptive Conjugation, § 220.

(2) Verbs in -g-er or -g-ir, whether regular verbs or not, change g to j before flexional o or a.

Coger, to gather, take, etc.

Pres. Indic., 1st Sing. cojo Pres. Subj. coja, etc.

Corregir, to correct

Pres. Indic., 1st Sing. corrijo

Pres. Subj. corrija, etc. (A radical-changing verb.)

(3) Verbs in -qu-ir change qu to c before flexional o or a.

Delinquir, to be delinquent

Pres. Indic., 1st Sing. delinco Pres. Subj. delinca, etc.

(4) Verbs in -gu-ir omit the u before flexional o or a. The u is a mere sign of "hard" g in the infinitive, and is not needed before a following o or a.

Distinguir, to distinguish

Pres. Indic., 1st Sing. distingo Pres. Subj. distinga, etc.

216. In the second and third conjugations the diphthongs -ie- and -i6 occur in certain endings (present participle, third person singular, and third person plural of the preterite indicative, and throughout the two imperfects and the hypothetical of the subjunctive). If the verb stem end in a vowel (e.g. le-er, 'to read'), the i of these diphthongal endings must be changed to y, for it is a general rule (and therefore applicable to all verbs, whether regular or not) that unaccented i cannot stand between two vowels.

Le-er, to read

Pres. Part.	le-yendo (for le-iendo)
Pret. Indic., 3d Sing.	le-yó (for le-ió)
3d Pl.	le-yeron (for le-ieron)
Imperf. Subj., 1st Form	le-yera, etc. (for le-iera, etc.)
2d Form	le-yese, etc. (for le-iese, etc.)
Hypothetical	le-yere, etc. (for le-ie.e, etc.)

This change is particularly common in -uir verbs (huir, 'to flee,' huyendo, etc.).

217. If the verb stem end in ll or ñ, the i of the diphthongal endings -ie- and -i6 disappears. This is true of all verbs, regular or not. Certain irregular verbs (especially decir, 'to say,' traer, 'to bring,' and -ducir derivatives) likewise lose the i of their -ie- endings after the j of their preterite stem.

Bullir, to boil

Pres. Part.	bull-endo (instead of bull-iendo)
Pret. Indic., 3d Sing.	bull-6 (instead of bull-i6)
3d Pl.	bull-eron (instead of bull-ieron)
Impf. Subj., 1st Form	bull-ese, etc.
2d Form	bull-era, etc.
Hyp. Subj.	bull-ere, etc.

Plañir, to lament

plañ-endo	plañ-6	plañ-eron
plañ-ese, etc.	plañ-era, etc.	plañ-ere, etc.

Traer, to bring

Pret. Indic., 3d Pl.,	traj-eron
Subj.	traj-ese, etc.	traj-era, etc.	traj-ere, etc.

218. In the three persons singular and in the third plural of the present tenses (indicative, subjunctive, and imperative), certain -iar and -uar verbs take an accent on the i or the u.

Variar, to vary

Pres. Indic.	varío	varías	varía	(variarnos)	(variáis)	varían
Pres. Subj.	varíe	varíes	varíe	(variemos)	(variéis)	varíen
Imper. Sing.	varía

Acentuar, to accentuate, to accent

Pres. Indic.	acentúo	acentúas	acentúa	acentúan
Pres. Subj.	acentúe	acentúes	acentúe	acentúen
Imper. Sing.	acentúa

219. Not all the -iar and -uar verbs take this accent; cf. principiar, 'to begin'; principio, 'I begin'; presenciar, 'to witness'; presencio, 'I witness'; diferenciar, 'to differentiate'; diferencian, 'they differentiate.' By practice only can it be determined whether the accent should fall on the i and the u or not. The verbs in the following lists are among the commonest taking the accent.

(1) -iar:

acuantiar	calofriar	cuantiar	enfriar	guiar	telegrafiar
aliar	cariar	desafiar	enviar	hastiar	triar
ampliar	ciar	descarriar	espiar	liar	vaciar
arriar	confiar	desconfiar	estriar	piar	vanagloriar
ataviar	contrariar	descriar	expiar	porfiar	variar
averiar	correntiar	desvariar	fiar	resfriar	vigiar
aviar	criar	desviar	gloriar	rociar	zurriar

(2) -uar:

acentuar	continuar	extenuar	habituvar	perpetuar	situvar
actuar	desvirtuar	fluctuar	individuvar	puntuvar	tunultuar
arruar	efectuvar	ganzuar	infatuvar	redituar	usufructuar
atenuvar	evaluvar	graduvar	insinuvar	ruvar	valuvar
conceptuar	exceptuar

Irregular, too, are yacer, 'to lie,' and placer, 'to please.' Pacer, 'to graze,' and balbucir, 'to stammer,' are hardly used in the forms that would have an inserted z.

b. Certain irregular verbs conjugate their present tenses after the fashion of the inceptive verb. Thus the -ducir derivatives (conducir, inducir, etc.) have in the pres. indic. -duzco, and in the pres. subj. -duzca, -duzcas, -duzca, -duzcamos, -duzcáis, -duzcan. The rest of their present forms are also like those of lucir; that is, are those of regular verbs of the third conjugation. Their preterite tenses are irregular. See § 256.

221. Radical-changing Verbs.—Quite a number of verbs are regular as to their flexional endings, but under certain conditions modify the vocalic nature of their radical or root syllable. In these verbs the infinitive shows the unmodified root vowel, which must be either e or o. As a result of accentual influences or of apparent umlaut (e.g. the influence of the i of one of the diphthongs ie, io, in the following syllable) the e may become ie or even i and the o may become ue or even u.

222. There are three main classes of these radical-changing verbs. Their variations may be represented by this scheme :

- | | | |
|---|---|--|
| I. Root vowel e becomes ie | } | under the accent. |
| Root vowel o becomes ue | | |
| II. Root vowel e becomes ie | } | under the accent. |
| Root vowel o becomes ue | | |
| Root vowel e becomes i | } | when not accented, if the following syllable have a or one of the diphthongs ie , io . |
| Root vowel o becomes u | | |
| III. Root vowel e becomes i , both (1) under the accent and (2) when not accented, if followed by a syllable with a or one of the diphthongs ie , io . | | |

NOTE.—It is well for students to be on their guard against all verbs showing e or o in what seems to be the root vowel of the infinitive. A verb list should be consulted for the purpose of ascertaining whether they are radical-changing or not.

223. This first class of radical-changing verbs embraces only -ar and -er verbs. In these, e becomes ie and o becomes ue when the root syllable has the accent. It can have the accent only in the three persons singular and the third person plural of the present indicative and present subjunctive, and in the second person singular of the imperative. These forms alone, then, show any change: all the other forms are perfectly regular. The variations may be illustrated by the verbs

(1) Pensar, pensando, pensado

NOTE.—The change of the root vowels e and o to ie and ue under the accent started with verbs having as their root vowels in Latin ĕ or ae (vulgar Latin open e) and ō. In the development of Latin into Spanish these vowels could not remain under the accent (as the long vowels did), but when stressed they broke into the corresponding diphthongs ie, ue.

When not under the accent, they ordinarily preserved their integrity in Spanish: cf. Latin pĕtra, Spanish pedra, 'stone'; Latin tĕrra, Spanish tierra, 'earth'; Latin cĕrtus, Spanish cierto, 'certain'; Latin caecus, Spanish ciego, 'blind'; Latin fŏrtis, Spanish fuerte, 'strong'; but with unaccented and therefore retained root vowel, Latin pĕtrārius*, Spanish pedrero, 'stone-cutter'; Latin tĕrrĕnus, Spanish terreno, 'land,' etc., etc.

224. Certain verbs in -olver are of this first radical-changing class, but have only an irregular past participle in -uelto.

These are chiefly volver, to return, to come back;

Pres. Indic. vuelvo, vuelves, etc.; Past Part. vuelto; and its derivatives, devolver, 'to give back'; envolver, 'to wrap up'; revolver, 'to stir,' etc., and solver, 'to loosen,' and its derivatives, absolver, 'to absolve'; disolver, 'to dissolve'; resolver, 'to resolve,' etc.

225. Orthographic changes already indicated for regular verbs are to be observed also in radical-changing verbs; cf. §§ 213-217, e.g.:

c to qu,	revolcarse, 'to wallow':	{ Pret., 1st Sing. me revolqué Pres. Sbj., 1st Sing. me revuelque, etc.
g to gu,	cegar, 'to blind':	{ Pret. 1st Sing. cegué Pres. Sbj. 1st Sg. ciegue, etc.
z to c,	tropezar, 'to stumble':	{ Pret. 1st Sing. tropecé Pres. Sbj. 1st Sing. tropiece
c to z,	torcer, 'to twist':	{ Pres. Ind. tuerzo, but tuerces, tuerce, etc. Pres. Sbj. tuerza, tuerzas, etc.
(g)o to (g)üe,	degollar, 'to behead':	{ Pres. Ind. degüello, degüellas, etc. Pres. Sbj. degüelle, etc.

226. The verbs errar, 'to err,' and oler, 'to have an odor,' 'to smell,' are of this first radical-changing class, but wherever they stress their root syllables, the resulting ie of errar is changed to ye, and the resulting ue of oler to hue, because of the rule that no word should begin with the diphthongs ie or ue.

a. An h is also inserted before the ue of the stressed root syllables of desosar, 'to bone,' 'to unbone,' and desovar, 'to spawn.' Here the h is due to the analogy of the related nouns hueso, 'bone,' and huevo, 'egg.'

In similar fashion desovar has deshuevo deshuevas deshueva desovamos etc.

227. Instead of o in the unaccented syllables, to correspond to ue of the accented syllables, jugar, 'to play,' now shows u. But the u has simply taken the place of older o. The ue remains wherever originally developed. Before flexional e of the ending, u is inserted after the g.

Jugar, jugando, jugado

Pres. Ind.	juego	juegas	juega	jugamos	jugáis	juegan
Pres. Subj.	juegue	juegues	juegue	juguemos	juguéis	jueguen
Imperat.	—	juega	—	—	jugad	—
Pret. Ind.	jugué, etc.

All other forms have u.

228. Three verbs in -ir seem to belong to this class, which regularly comprises only -ar and -er verbs. These are discernir, 'to discern,' concernir, 'to concern' (cf. § 264), adquirir, 'to acquire,' and inquirir, 'to inquire.' But they are derivatives and are related to simple verbs in -er, viz. cerner and querer.¹ Adquirir and inquirir show the further peculiarity of an i in the unstressed root forms, to correspond to the ie of the stressed root syllables; but it is to be observed that querer shows the original e.

(1) Discernir, discerniendo, discernido

¹ Querer is irregular, adquirir and inquirir are regular, in the preterite and allied forms.

All other forms are regular as of the -ir conjugation.

229. The second radical-changing class embraces only verbs of the third conjugation with the root vowel e or o.

As in the first class, e becomes ie and o becomes ue under the accent. When not accented the e is changed to i and the o to u, if the strong vowel a or one of the diphthongs ie, io occur in the next syllable. In all other cases the original e and o remain. This class may be illustrated by the conjugation of the verbs sentir, ‘to feel,’ and dormir, ‘to sleep.’

	{	durm-iéremos	durm-iereis	durm-ieren

a. The number of o verbs in this second radical-changing class is small: dormir, 'to sleep,' and morir, 'to die,' are the only simple verbs in it. Morir is conjugated exactly like dormir except in its past participle, which has only the irregular form muerto. The past participle muerto is not only intransitive, meaning 'died,' 'dead' (el hombre ha muerto, 'the man has died,' 'the man is dead'); but with a personal object it may be transitive, meaning 'killed' (hemos muerto al soldado, 'we have killed the soldier').

230. The third radical-changing class consists only of third-conjugation verbs with the root vowel e. A change occurs only in the same cases as in Class II, viz. under the accent, and where the root syllable is not accented if it be followed by a or one of the diphthongs ie, io. In both these cases the e becomes i (so that there is no diphthong in the root syllable of these verbs). In all other forms the e remains and those forms are regular as of the third conjugation. The class may be illustrated by the conjugation of vestir, 'to clothe.'

As in the second class, it is to be noted that the stem of the preterite, third person singular, prevails throughout the subjunctive imperfects and hypothetical.

231. The orthographical changes stated for regular verbs are to be observed here: cf. §§ 213-217.

232. The verb erguir, 'to erect,' may in the stressed root syllables of its present tenses have either the diphthong ie (written ye because it is at the beginning of the word) or the vowel i. It may be conjugated throughout as of either the second or the third radical-changing class. Of course its u disappears before o or a.

233. There are certain verbs in -eír that belong to this class. They change their e to i in the same cases as vestir, but whenever that i comes into conjunction with i of a following diphthong ie or ió, one of the two i's disappears, as in reír, 'to laugh.'

Reír, riendo (for ri-iendo), re-ído

Pres. Indic.	rí-o	rí-es	rí-e	re-í-mos	re-ís	rí-en

Imperf. Subj., 2d Form	riera (for ri-iera)		rieras, etc.
Hyp. Subj.	riere (for ri-iere)		rieres, etc.

a. This is now the customary conjugation of reír and other -eír verbs of this class. Formerly—at least in the case of reír itself—the i was not lost necessarily, and there resulted such forms as riyendo (unaccented i changed to y between vowels), riyó, riyeron, riyese, etc., riyera, etc., riyere, etc. Note the many forms of reír requiring a written accent.

234. The verb podrir, 'to putrefy,' was once included in this class as an example of a change of o to u in conjugation. But in practice it has become a regular verb of the third conjugation, with u everywhere in the root syllable. The o is retained only in by-forms of the infinitive and past participle, podrir and podrido. Pudrir is preferred to podrir, but as the passive participle podrido seems to be still the commoner form.

235. -Uir Verbs.—These include only verbs with a pronounced u (written with a diæresis when g precedes, as in argüir, 'to argue').

Their peculiarity consists in adding y to their stem vowel u, except where the flexional ending begins with i (whether stressed i or i of the diphthongs ie, io). Of course, the future and conditional indicative do not take the y, being based on the infinitive. Besides this y added to the stem, the conjugation of these verbs shows a y (in the present participle, the preterite, third singular, and third plural, and the subjunctive imperfects and hypothetical) which is not an addition, but merely represents the unaccented i of the diphthongal ending, which has chanced to come between vowels: cf. § 216.

The class may be illustrated by the conjugation of huir, 'to flee.'

a. Note that the future and the conditional of the indicative are based on a contract form of the infinitive. The form hé is, in accordance with the example set by the Spanish Academy, usually classed as imperative singular of haber; it may, however, represent a peculiar phonetic development of the imperative singular of the verb ver, 'to see,' as the grammarian Cuervo suggests. It is most common in combination with the adverb aquí, 'here,' hé aquí, 'behold.' As the impersonal verb 'to be,' haber takes the suffix y (an old adverb meaning 'there') in the present indicative, whence hay, 'there is' or 'there are.' For the other moods and tenses it simply has the third person singular forms without the appended y: había, 'there was (were),' habrá, 'there will be,' etc.

It is characteristic of many irregular verbs that in the first and third singular of the preterite indicative they stress the stem vowel and not the ending: compare hube, hubo with temí, temió.

a. The present tenses of estar are perfectly regular as of the first conjugation, except for the y appended to the first person singular, present indicative form (cf. the y of soy, 'I am,' from ser; of doy, 'I give,' from dar; and of voy, 'I go,' from ir). Estar is the Latin verb stare, 'to stand,' which has had its sense weakened to 'to be,' and has received an initial (prosthetic) e, because in Spanish no word properly begins with s plus a consonant. All Latin words beginning with such a combination and surviving in Spanish take this e prefix (cf. also French état from Latin statum, etc.).

a. This verb is perfectly regular as of the first conjugation in all its forms except the preterite indicative and the three subjunctive tenses based on it. Note the resemblance of the preterite stems of estar, tener, and andar, i.e. estuv-, tuv-, and anduv-, to that of haber, i.e. hub- (spelled with v instead of b in earlier Spanish).

a. The stem of this verb is d-. Thereon are based the present tenses and the imperfect indicative with the regular endings of the first conjugation. The first person singular, present indicative, has also a y suffix (cf. ser, estar, and ir with soy, estoy, and voy). The preterite and the subjunctive imperfect and hypothetical tenses simply add to d- the regular endings of the second and third conjugation.

a. In the present tenses the verb is conjugated exactly like a radical-changing verb of the first class. The future and conditional indicative are based on a contract infinitive querr-, whose rr must be carefully pronounced, especially to distinguish the conditional from the imperfect indicative.

a. The present indicative and subjunctive follow the model of a radical-changing verb of the first class, but the present participle has the same stem as the preterite. The future and conditional indicatives are based on a contract infinitive. The verb has no imperative.

a. Note the two stems, one regular and the other irregular, in the present tenses. As is frequently the case, the present subjunctive uses throughout the irregular stem as found in the first person singular, present indicative. The future and conditional are based on a contract infinitive. The preterite cupe represents the Latin capui become cope and then cupe.

a. The past participle is irregular (from Latin factum). The imperative singular has no flexional ending, but consists only of the regular present stem as found in hac-es, etc., with, of course, z, and not c, in the final position. The future and conditional are based on a contract infinitive har. The preterite hice represents the Latin fēcī. Like hacer are conjugated its derivatives. Some of these, like satisfacer, 'to satisfy,' have instead of h the original Latin f of facere. Besides an imperative singular satisfaz there is found also a regular form satisface.

a. There are three different Latin verbs discernible in the make-up of this verb. The infinitive, present participle, past participle, imperative plural, future and conditional indicative, and imperfect indicative are associated with ire, 'to go.' The present indicative and subjunctive and the imperative singular forms come from vadere, 'to go.' The preterite and the subjunctive imperfects and hypothetical represent the Latin fui, fuissem, etc.; that is, they are simply borrowed from the corresponding tenses of the Spanish ser, 'to be.' Cf. in colloquial English 'I was to Boston yesterday' = 'I went (and returned).'

b. Ir is apparently the only Spanish verb having an imperative first plural form, viz. vamos. But authorities regard this as another form of the first plural, present subjunctive (i.e. while vayamos may represent a Latin vadeamus, vamos may represent a Latin vadamus which passed through the stage vaamos). In Cervantes and other classic writers there is found also a second form of the second plural, present subjunctive, viz. vais (i.e. while Latin vadeatis gave vayais, vadatis gave vais through vaais). In optative constructions vamos, 'let us go,' etc., alone can be used: vayamos is restricted in use to subordinate clauses. Vamos and vaya are frequently used as interjections (cf. French allons), meaning 'come now!' etc.

a. Certain forms have characteristics of a radical-changing verb (cf. present participle, second and third singular and third plural of present indicative, etc.). The imperative singular is without a flexional ending. The future and conditional of the indicative are based on a contract infinitive with inserted d. The preterite vine represents Latin vēnī.

a. The present tenses have both a regular and an irregular (valg-) stem. The imperative singular may have a flecational vowel or not; it usually does nowadays. The future and conditional indicative are based on a contract stem with inserted d. All other forms are perfectly regular.

252. Salir, to go out, come outSalir, saliendo, salido

Pres. Indic.	salg-o	sal-es	sal-e	sal-imos	sal-is	sal-en
Pres. Subj.	salg-a	salg-as	salg-a	salg-amos	salg-áis	salg-an

Hyp. Subj.	{ ca-yere ca-yéremos	ca-yeres ca-yereis	ca-yere ca-yeren

a. The present tenses have a regular and an irregular (caig-) stem. The rest of the verb is perfectly regular. Note, however, that a written accent is required on the i of the past participle and of the second singular and the first and second plural of the preterite, and that unaccented i between vowels has been changed to y in the preterite third singular and third plural, in the subjunctive imperfects and hypothetical, and in the present participle.

254. Oír, to hear

a. Three stems are visible in the present, viz. oig- (first singular, present indicative, and all of present subjunctive), oy- (second and third singular and third plural of present indicative and imperative singular), and the regular stem o- (first and second plural, present indicative, and imperative plural). The rest of the verb is regular, but unaccented i between vowels is changed to y (third singular and plural of preterite, and all of subjunctive imperfects and hypothetical, as well as present participle). Note that stressed i after o requires a written accent.

255. Traer, to bring

Traer, trayendo, traído

Pres. Indic.	{ traig-o tra-emos	tra-es tra-éis	tra-e tra-en
Pres. Subj.	{ traig-a traig-amos	traig-as traig-áis	traig-a traig-an

Hyp. Subj.	{ traj-ere traj-éremos	traj-eres traj-ereis	traj-ere traj-eren

a. The present tenses show a regular and an irregular (traig-) stem; the present participle exhibits the change of unaccented i between vowels to y (tra-iendo — tra-yendo). Note the written accent of the past partiple. The preterite traje represents the Latin traxi (a Latin x between vowels has usually become j in Spanish). The i of the diphthong ie has disappeared after the j; cf. § 217.

256. -ducir, to lead

This verb (from Latin ducere) is found in modern Spanish only in certain derivatives (conducir, deducir, inducir, reducir, etc.). Its conjugation may be illustrated by one of these.

a. The present tenses show the peculiarities of the inceptive verbs, to which, because there is a vowel before the -cir, this verb has been attracted. The preterite -duje represents the Latin duxi, and as usual the j absorbs the i of a following diphthong -ie-.

257. Decir, to say

Decir, diciendo, dicho

Pres. Indic.	dig-o	dic-es	dic-e	dec-imos	dec-ís	dic-en
Pres. Subj.	dig-a	dig-as	dig-a	dig-amos	dig-áis	dig-an

Hyp. Subj.	dij-ere	dij-eres	dij-ere	dij-éremos	dij-ereis	dij-eren

a. The present tenses and the present participle show vocalic conditions like those of the third class of radical-changing verbs. The past participle is irregular (from Latin dictum); the imperative singular lacks a flexional ending (cf. Latin dic). The future and conditional indicative are based on a contract infinitive, dir. Dije represents the Latin dixi, and after the j the i of the diphthong ie has disappeared (in preterite third plural and subjunctive imperfects and hypothetical). There is an indefinite form diz, 'it is said,' 'people say,' etc., which may represent a contraction of dice + se.

b. Derivatives of decir are bendecir, 'to bless,' and maldecir, 'to curse.' These imitate decir in their conjugation, except that they base their future and conditional indicative upon the uncontracted infinitive decir, whence the forms bendeciré, etc., maldeciré, etc., and have a flexional vowel in their imperative singular, bendice and maldice. Furthermore, they have regular past participles, bendecido and maldecido. The participles bendicho and maldicho are now antiquated, and the forms bendito and maldito occur only as adjectives. The derivatives contradecir, 'to contradict,' desdecir, 'to gainsay,' and predecir, 'to predict,' differ from decir only in having the full form of the imperative singular, contradice, desdice, predice.

258. Ver, to see

Ver, viendo, visto

Pres. Indic.	ve-o	v-es	v-e	v-emos	v-eis	v-en
Pres. Subj.	ve-a	ve-as	ve-a	ve-amos	ve-áis	ve-an
Imperat.	—	v-e	—	—	v-ed	—
Fut. Indic.	ver-é	ver-ás	ver-á	ver-emos	ver-éis	ver-án
Cond. Indic.	ver-ía	ver-ías	ver-ía	ver-íamos	ver-íais	ver-ían
Imperf. Indic.	ve-ía	ve-ías	ve-ía	ve-íamos	ve-íais	ve-ían

Hyp. Subj.	v-iere	v-ieres	v-iere	v-iéremos	v-iereis	v-ieren

a. The true present stem of this verb is ve-, which is seen in the first singular, present indicative (ve-o), and throughout in the present subjunctive (ve-a, etc.) and the imperfect indicative (ve-ía, etc.). Before a flexional e the stem loses its e, as in the remaining forms of the present indicative, the infinitive, and the imperative. It also loses the e in the present participle. The past participle is irregular. The preterite ví represents the Latin vīdī.¹ In poetry an imperfect indicative vía, vías (with reduced stem v-) is sometimes found even now.

b. Compounds of ver which show the reduced present stem (v-), such as antever, 'to foresee,' prever, 'to foresee,' rever, 'to see again,' 'to review,' are conjugated exactly like it. On the other hand, the derivative prover, 'to provide,' which shows the full present stem (ve-), is conjugated throughout as a perfectly regular verb. It has, however, both a regular past participle, proveído, and an irregular one, provisto; and in the present participle, the preterite, third singular and third plural, and the subjunctive imperfect and hypothetical, it changes the i of the diphthongs -ie-, -ió, to y.

Note the accent required in the regular past participle and the second singular, and the first and second plural of the preterite.

Anomalous Past Participles

259. Four regular verbs of the third conjugation have only irregular past participles.

abrir, to open, abierto.	imprimir { to print } { to impress } , impreso cubrir, to cover, cubierto.
escribir, to write, escrito.

This peculiarity is shared by their compounds.

a. The participle escribido is found in what is perhaps punning use in such an expression as un hombre (bien) leído y escrito, 'a man who can read and write' (cf. the influence of the participle leído; its attractive force may explain escribido).

260. Two regular verbs of the second conjugation have both a regular and an irregular past participle.

romper, to break, rompido and roto.

Preso and roto are preferred for the compound tenses ; rompido, however, is far more common than roto in the intransitive use.

261. Two regular verbs of the third conjugation have both a regular and an irregular past participle.

The regular participle alone seems now to be used in the compound tenses ; the other forms are practically adjectives.

Defective Verbs

262. Placer, 'to please.' Used now chiefly as an impersonal verb, i.e. only in the third person singular forms of its tenses. Traces of other forms are occasionally found in the present tenses ; e.g. placen. Its impersonal conjugation is this :

Pres. Ind.	place	Pres. Subj.	plega, plegue or plazca
Impf. Ind.	{ placía (rare)	Impf. Subj., 1st Form	{ pluguiese or placiese
Pret. Ind.	{ plugo or plació	Impf. Subj., 2d Form	{ pluguiera or placiera
Fut. Ind.	placerá	Hyp. Subj.	pluguiere or placiere
Cond. Ind.	placería	Pres. Part.	placiendo

a. The commonest form is pluguiera, which is used in optative expressions : ¡pluguiera á Dios! 'would to God!'

b. The derivative complacer is of the class of verbs with inceptive endings ; another derivative, aplacer, is found in the third person singular and plural forms, such as aplace, aplacen, aplacía, and aplacían.

263. Yacer, 'to lie.' This verb has many peculiarities of the inceptive class. It is nearly obsolete, and is chiefly used in the third person forms.

Yacer, yaciendo, yacido

Pres. Indic.	{ yazco yazgo yago }	yaces	yace	yacemos	yacéis	yacen
Pres. Subj.	{ yazca yazga yaga }	yazcas, etc.	yazgas, etc.	yagas, etc.
Imperat.		yace or yaz

The other forms are regular.

yací, etc.; yaciese, etc.; yaciera, etc.; yaciere, etc.; yaceré, etc.; yacería, etc.

264. Concernir, 'to concern,' occurs only in the third person singular and plural forms.

Pres. Indic.	concierne	conciernen
Pres. Subj.	concierna	conciernan
Fut. Indic.	concernirá	concernirán
Cond. Indic.	concerniría	concernirían
Imperf. Indic.	concernía	concernían
Pret. Indic.	concernió	concernieron
Imperf. Subj., 1st Form	concerniese	concerniesen
Imperf. Subj., 2d Form	concerniera	concernieran
Hyp. Subj.	concerniere	concernieren

265. Soler, 'to be accustomed,' is used now in hardly any forms except those of the present and imperfect indicative.

Pres. Indic.	suelo	sueles	suele	solemos	soléis	suelen
Imperf. Indic.	solía	solías	solía	solíamos	solíais	solían

The present participle soliendo, the past participle solido, and the preterite solí, etc., are exceedingly rare. All other forms do not occur.

266. Atañer, 'to appertain,' is only found in the third person forms, especially of the present indicative.

atañe atañen

267. Raer, 'to erase,' is but little used. Its conjugation is like that of caer, with the additional forms raya, rayas, etc., in the present subjunctive.

268. Roer, 'to gnaw.' This may have any one of three present stems before its endings -o and -a; otherwise it is a regular verb of the second conjugation.

Pres. Indic.	{	ro-o	}	roes	roe	roemos	roéis	roen
		roig-o
		roy-o
Pres. Subj.	{	ro-a	}	ro-as, etc.
		roig-a		roig-as, etc.
		roy-a		roy-as, etc.

But the first person singular, present indicative, and all the present subjunctive are rather shunned in actual use.

a. The derivative corroer, 'to corrode,' avoids the stems ending in -ig and -y.

269. It is generally stated that the preterite forms repuse, 'I replied,' repusiste, 'thou didst reply,' etc., are from the verb reponer, which does not in its other tenses and forms connect itself with the sense of "reply." But repuse, etc., may rather connect themselves with the Vulgar Latin irregular preterite of respondere, viz. * resposi, etc.

270. Some ten verbs of the third regular conjugation occur only in the forms whose flexional ending begins with i. These are abolir, to abolish.

aguerrir, to make warlike.

arrecirse, to become numb.

aterirse, to become numb.

desmarrirse, to become sad.

despavorir, to become frightened.

empedernir, to harden.

manir, to become tender.

For these there can occur in the present indicative and imperative only the forms in -imos, -ís, and -id (e.g. abolimos, abolís, abolid). They have no subjunctive present forms. They may have all the rest of the conjugation, since the endings begin with i.

271. List of Verbs.

The following list embraces radical-changing, -uir, irregular, and anomalous verbs. The verbs with inceptive endings (-cer or -cir preceded by a vowel) are not included: they simply follow the models given in § 220. In the case of derivatives reference is made to the conjugation of the simple verbs, which they follow. The numbers refer to paragraphs.

VOCABULARY

ENGLISH-SPANISH

NOTE. — Not all the words used in the Exercises will be found in the English-Spanish part of the General Vocabulary. If an English-Spanish exercise involves the use of Spanish words already employed in the preceding Spanish-English exercise of the same lesson, as occurs especially in the second half of the Grammar, those words are often not included in the English-Spanish part of the Vocabulary. In such cases the student needs no help, provided he translate properly the Spanish-English sentences of the particular lesson.
